A DOCTOR'S DEED.

Caught in Doing the Work of a Ghoul,

HE MURDERS HIS FRIEND

The Confession of a Dying Man Brings to Light a Horrible Story.

CLARKSVILLE, Tenn., April 8.—There has been found among the private papers of the late Dr. Francis T. Foutenoy a written confession of crime of which was committed twenty-eight years ago and of which Dr. Foutenoy was never suspected. Rev. A. M. Feltner, rector of the Episcopal Church, disappeared mysteriously in 1865, and diligent search by his friends, aided by detectives, failed to furnish any clew as to what became of him. His wife had just died, but beyond that no cause for melancholy was known, and nothing could be learned to indicate any motive for his going away so strangely.

The document in question is a confession by Dr. Foutenoy that he murdered Feltner. The confession goes into detail. Dr. Foutenoy was Mrs. Feltner's physician and became greatly interested in her case because of some peculiar features that appealed to his professional zeal. When Mrs. Feltner died he yielded to the temptation to steal the body for an autopsy. He had removed it from the grave and was preparing to refill it, when he received a stunning blow from behind. Wheeling, he found himself face to face with Feltner.

The latter was maddened by the desecration of his wife's grave. The rector again attacked him and to defend himself, knowing that protests would be useless, the doctor seized a shovel and struck his assailant on the head, hoping to stun him and escape. The blow crushed the temple bone, causing instant death. The horrified murderer placed the body in the empty coffin and refilled the grave. Rain washed away all traces of work and the strange disappearance was soon almost forgotten.

Dr. Foutenoy completed his autopsy with great advantage to science. He adopted his victim's two children, both of whom are living. The daughter is married to a state official and the son is in the government service. Dr. Foutenoy was a wealthy bachelor, and left them his fortune. Mrs. Feltner's body was found where the confession said it had been buried in the cellar and reinterred beside that of her husband.

Out on Strike.

TOPEKA, April 8.—Eleven hundred machinists, boiler makers, blacksmiths and helpers in the shops of the Santa Fe road struck this afternoon for an advance in wages and other demands with fellow workmen in the same lines along the entire system, the demands having been definitely rejected by the management. The demand was for an increase of 25 cents per day in wages, that inexperienced men should not be required to do the work of skilled mechanics, and that when expenses are to be reduced men are not to be discharged, but the hours reduced. The strike was wholly unexpected except by the men themselves and the management of the road, as no hint of trouble had reached the public.

Denver, April 8.—Private advices have been received from Albuquerque to the effect that all mechanics in the employ of the Santa Fe road and of the Atlantic & Pacific struck this morning. This point is of considerable importance, as it is the junction of the roads named.

Want Annexation.

NEW YORK, April 8.—Hon. Honore Mercier, late premier of Quebec; Hon. J. Robidoux, ex-attorney general of Quebec; Hon. Charles Langier, formerly provincial secretary; L. J. A. Papineau, who was with his father in the rebellion of 1837, and J. X. Perrault of Montreal, ex-member of the Ottawa parliament, are in this city. They profess to be here for pleasure and private business only, but it is believed they will confer while in this city with men most prominent in this country as advocates of annexation. Mercier says Canada wants and will ere long have independence. Then she will be ready to treat with the United States for annexation. She does not want Great Britain to negotiate the treaty of annexation as its terms would be made for England's advantage and not Canada's.

To Talk With Tammany.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—Cleveland will go to New York this afternoon to remain over Sunday. It is believed that his visit will have something to do with the distribution of Federal patronage in the Empire State. That the President is willing to treat with Tammany was the inference drawn from an occurrence this morning. Lieutenant Governor Sheehan, one of the Tammany leaders, called at the White House and had a brief interview with the President. His purpose was to talk over New York patronage, but it was agreed that it was not a propitious time, and a mutually satisfactory agreement was made for Sheehan to call on the President for the purpose next Friday.

After Fresh Air.

WILMINGTON, Del., April 8.—President Cleveland, Secretary of State Gresham and United States Senator White of Louisiana reached this city at 5.15 this evening by the Pennsylvania railroad. The party was met by Embassador Thomas F. Bayard and in five minutes after the train stopped the party were on the way to Delamore place, Bayard's home. A crowd gave them a parting cheer and Cleveland raised his hat. Mr. Bayard did not extend any invitation for callers tonight and says the visit was made on his suggestion in order to give the President a day of rest and breath the fresh air. No plans are made for tomorrow. The Presidential party will return to Washington on Monday.

That Wonderful Law.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 8.—District Attorney Barnes of this city states that he will test the constitutionality of the prison parole law recently passed by the legislature. He claims that it is invalid inasmuch as the power to pardon and commute sentences is by the constitution vested in the governor, and cannot in any wise be modified or limited by mere legislative enactment. The board of prison commissioners, which held a meeting today, appointed a committee to devise rules under which the provision of the patrole law shall be applied. It is expected by the commission that the statute cannot be put into active operation for some months.

Mrs. E. J. Griffith and children will leave for Cincinnati in a few days, to remain through the summer months.

Go to the polls early and avoid the rush in the afternoon.

Don't try to vote unless you've resided thirty days in the precinct in which you offer your vote. This is stated particularly for the benefit of the Triangle stuffers.

Don't permit the Triangle hirelings at the polls to bulldoze you. Vote if you have a right to.

LOOTING THE TREASURY.

For Once the Triangle felt Ashamed of Themselves.

For he past two weeks the Triangle has had a more than usually large number of men at work on the streets, presumably to keep the laborers solid on election day. So barefaced had this shameless diversion of the city's funds become that Dr. Leach spoke to the authorities about the matter yesterday forenoon, saying that much unfavorable comment had been caused and suggesting that the men be taken off.

At noon a gang of thirty-five men working on the gravel train were laid off. The matter was too public and votes were being lost for the Triangle.

SUDDEN DEATH.

Carleton Curtis Succumbs to Heart Failure.

Much surprise and regret was felt yesterday by his numerous friends when it was learned that Carleton Curtis had suddenly died. Mr. Curtis was in his room at his home in Park addition when he was seized with heart failure. His wife was in adjoining room and heard him groan, but before she reached his side he had expired.

The deceased was 45 years of age and leaves three children. He has been in Fresno many years and was well and favorably known. His funeral will take place on Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock from his residence in Park addition.

SUIT FOR DIVORCE

Brought by Etta A. Sutton Against J. K. Sutton.

In the superior court yesterday Etta A. Sutton, by her attorney O. L. Everts, brought an action for a divorce against John K. Sutton.

Mrs. Sutton alleges that they were married in Cattaraugus county, New York, on November 4, 1872. The grounds on which she asks for a divorce she alleges to be the defendant's habitual intemperance and his failure to provide for her because of his profligacy and dissipation.

Boss Fahey for Mayor.

Voters should bear in mind that if Fahey, Alford and Jnaty should be elected next Monday Boss Fahey may be made the president of the council and ex-officio mayor of this city. Fahey's friends have made their boasts to this effect. If such a thing should happen what would the people of Merced and San Francisco think of the intelligence of the people of Fresno? Would Fahey be a good advertisement to be sent abroad to invite immigration to this county?

Unlawful Detainer.

H. S. Williams, by his attorneys Sayle & Coldwell, brought suit in the superior court yesterday against A. F. Christians for unlawful detainer. Williams claims possession of the east half of the southeast quarter of section 10, township 8 south, range 19 east, which he alleges the defendant is withholding from him. He asks for $300 damages and $100 for the rents and profits of the land.

The Expositor shouldn't let its scientific reporter write about politics. Slush is bound to be the result when it does.

CORROBORATED.

Policeman Johnston Explains a Shameful Episode.

HE HAD HIS STAR ON, TOO

A Playful Remark Concerning Business for the Morgue—Boss Fahey Gave the Order.

Policeman Johnston yesterday proffered his statement to a REPUBLICAN reporter regarding his visit to the Southern Pacific lodging house last Friday night. His statement although fuller does not differ materially from the account published in yesterday morning's REPUBLICAN. Mr. Johnston said:

"I went to the Southern Pacific lodging house last Friday night and I asked permission of Mrs. C. H. Toy to see the register. She said 'certainly; step into the parlor and take a chair.' She then handed me the book and said, 'There are two pages of the register.'

"I took the register and started in writing the names off, and after I had been there about fifteen minutes in came Toy, Robinson and ten or fifteen others. They asked me what right I had in their parlor. I said to Toy, 'I was invited in by your wife and she gave me permission to see the register.'

"He insisted that I had no right in there and I claimed that I had. He then snatched the book out of my hand and I said, 'I dont want to have any trouble here.'

"Toy said to me, 'Give me five minutes to go and consult my lawyer.' I waited until he returned, and he said that his lawyer advised him that he need not let any one see the register. I insisted that I had a right to examine any public register."

"Who sent you there?" asked the reporter.

"I have no right to answer that question," responded Mr. Johnston.

"Did you have your star on?"

"Yes, sir; I had my star on."

As THE REPUBLICAN had charged yesterday morning that Boss Fahey had sent Policeman Johnston to the Southern Pacific lodging house, here was a fine opportunity for Mr. Johnston to deny that statement. But he didn't.

Mr. Toy was seen in relation to the matter. He said:

"My wife told me that Johnston said to her, 'This is going to be a very hot election. I wish I was away from here next Monday, because some of the boys will be liable to be put in the morgue.'"

Policeman's Johnson's action in this matter was an outrage. He had no more right to demand an inspection of a lodging house register than he would have to enter a dry goods store or a bank and demand an inspection of the books. The fact that Mrs. Toy gave her permission does not alter the case at all. Johnson had his star on and the lady was intimidated, not knowing her rights in the matter. The only excuse that can be pleaded for Johnson is that he was obeying the orders of Boss Fahey and that if he had declined to do as he had been commanded he would have suffered the consequences.

The affair is exactly in keeping with the bulldozing policy of the Fourth ward Ross.

ROTTEN POLITICS.

How it is Mixed with the Public Schools.

The San Francisco newspapers are making a great fuss about the charge that positions in the school department are sold for coin. One who is not posted might think this was a new discovery. As a matter of fact it has been notorious for years that no one could obtain an appointment without paying roundly for it. The price used to be $250, but it has steadily increased until now $1000 is offered. No one knows this better than the very newspapers which are making such a hullaballoo over it now. Worse than this, it is also well known that more than one girl anxious to become a teacher has yielded herself to the embraces of the lecherous old scoundrels who have become school directors. It is not so long since a prominent director was caught in a disreputable house with two school teachers, yet by the exercise of his political "pull" he was able to hush up the scandal and keep his name out of the papers. All these facts are well known to every newspaper man in the city, just as the methods by which the silence of the press has been obtained in the past are known to them.—Kern County Californian.

KINGSBURG.

Items Concerning Society and Business in That Burg.

From the Republican's Special Correspondent.

KINGSBURG, April 8.—Traver will celebrate its birthday today. There will be a rabbit drive, barbecue and ball in the evening. A large number from here will attend.

The Kingsburg branch of the Fresno Raisin Company held a meeting last Wednesday, to consider the advisability of withdrawing from the company and packing their own crop. No definite action was taken except to appoint a committee to examine the books of the company.

Dentist Conner is in town again and located at the Kingsburg hotel.

William Allison, a Bakersfield swamp angel, is up for a few days.

The Expositor of yesterday stated that the people in Judge Harris court room could scarcely hear their ears. Are people up there in the habit of doing such things as that? We have heard of people tending their ears.

Mayor Garrett has been in Portarville during the week. KINGS BURGER.

THE virus of Fabeyism is already permeating the whole body politic.

GROVER is acting as though he'd just as leave bite a slice of cold Turkey as not.

THE Esquimaux at Chicago are all broken out with the measles, and it is all the managers of the show can do to prevent them from breaking out for their own country.

LOS ANGELES claims to have nearly everything on the earth, including a brand new anarchists' organization. And something is liable to pop down there at any time.

SAN PEDRO and Santa Monica are still quarreling over the appropriation for a deep water harbor, and as a consequence both places are liable to be left high and dry by the roaring surf.

MUNICIPAL politics were clean and decent in Fresno until he board of trustees became Triangulated and jobbery became its rule of action. Fabeyism is the muck in which has grown the harvest of shame and disgrace which the city is reaping.

THERE is widespread disappointment over the fact that Boss Fahey failed to accept the challenge of Laborer Mernin for a literary contest. There has not been a circus or successful comedy in town for some time, and public expectation was raised to a high pitch. It is a sad disappointment.

EDWARD ATKINSON, when spoken of for office rather unnecessarily declined. He did not want a place with a "beggarly $4000 or $5000 a year." Yet Mr. Atkinson's chief delight, and the circumstances upon which his fame as a statistician rests, is an ability to show by figures—always unanswerable—how a man can rear a family and be so happy on 90 cents per day that to wish for more is an evidence of sinful greed.—Examiner.

It is almost unnecessary to add that Mr. Atkinson is one of the most enthusiastic free traders in this country. He has figured out to the fraction of a cent how a laboring man and a big family can live in comfort on 90 cents a day, but of course for the class to which he belongs four or five thousand a year is a mere bagatelle.

Every reasonable, patriotic and honest citizen must admit the necessity of a change. The opponents of the Triangle are pledged by the Republican platform to go back to the liberal and decent political methods of former administrations. In the fulfillment of that obligation they will be required to take the fire department out of politics and to select men for public positions on account of their fitness rather than their political services. This pledge cannot and must not be disregarded.

The good name and reputation of Fresno as well as her material interests are at stake in Monday's election. Any citizen who is inclined on account of political or other prejudices to vote for a perpetuation of the past administration should seriously consider his duty to the city and his fellow citizens before casting his ballot. When he does that, he cannot vote for the Triangle.

It was expected that the organ of the Triangle would spring something remarkable in its last issue before the election, and it did. That column roorback about printing deputy sheriff badges in order to put them on illegal voters, is probably the most extraordinary thing that ever appeared in the columns of a newspaper printed in an intelligent community. The only question which it creates is whether the paper has lapsed into absolute idiocy, or whether it believes it is addressing itself to a community of imbeciles, who could be led to believe that an official badge of any sort could be used by an illegal voter for a passport at the polls. Such a miserable, ridiculous and shameless falsehood could only have originated in a newspaper which is supporting the cause and methods of candidates whose official record it has denounced in unqualified terms. Its mendacity is too apparent to even require contradicting. The only truth stated in that entire column of verbose falsehood is that such badges have been printed. That is no secret, nor intended to be such. They are in the sheriff's office, ready for use in any emergency which may occur. That they will be required we have no doubt. It is an open secret that a program of bulldozing and intimidation in the interests of the Triangle candidates has been fully arranged, and that unless prevented by the strong arm of the law honest citizens and legal voters who are opposed to the perpetuation of that power will be subjected to insult and brutal treatment, while the imported voters of the Triangle will be unmolested. If there had heretofore been any doubt that such infamous program would be attempted, the use of members of the police force for the purpose of intimidation and other disreputable political work, would set the question at rest. Sheriff Scott has simply done his official duty in making preparations to preserve the peace and protect honest citizens in this city on next Monday. Had he not done so, he would have failed to perform his plain duty as it is pointed out and made unmistakable by existing conditions.

THE RESULT IMPORTANT.

Before another issue of this paper, the municipal election will have occurred, and questions of vital importance to the city will have been determined The contest has necessarily been an unpleasant one, and there will be a universal feeling of relief when it is over.

Political campaigns, at best, come too frequently for the comfort of the community, and when, as in this instance, public officials are candidates who are politicians of the order of ward bosses, whose official acts, in the language of their newspaper organ, have been at all times in defiance of public opinion and the interests of the community, the objectionable features of the campaign naturally become intensified, and assume the character of an unqualified nuisance in the minds of decent and peace-loving citizens. With politicians of the Fahey stripe in the field as candidates for places of honor and responsibility, however, nothing different can be expected; but if their selfish and dangerous ambitions are defeated the universal verdict will be that the result of the contest amply repays for all the discomfort and disquiet which it has occasioned.

With the record of the Triangle aspirants so fully impressed upon the public mind it is unnecessary at this late day to recount the reasons which should insure their defeat. It is only necessary in passing to recall to the mind of the voter that ever since the time the present council opened proceedings by allowing themselves three times the amount for their services as an equalizing board than their predecessors had received, there has been a series of political and other jobs worked through the board, to the undeniable detriment of the business of the city and the safety of the public treasury.

The fire department was disrupted and turned into a political machine, and the chronic hungry disposition for the letting of contracts involving large amounts is sufficiently illustrated in their determined, expensive but fo.le efforts take the building of the high school out of the hands of the school board and handle the funds of the school districts. More recently the squandering of $5000 in worse than useless gutter plastering and the letting of that contract for $1000 more than the lowest bid, is an example of the established precedent of letting contracts to the highest bidder, in matters where the law was not entirely ignored and work involving many hundred dollars farmed out to political or business favorites.

Undoubtedly one of the principal rivals of American workingmen in the American market, as soon as the new tariff throws open this market to foreign competition, will be India. British manufacturers are already dismayed by the development of Indian industries, and by the facts and figures showing that India is rapidly gaining control of the eastern markets, so far as the supply of cotton goods is concerned. Up to a recent time it was the boast of British spinners and manufacturers that whatever tariffs might be imposed on cotton goods by other nations, the British cotton trade could not be seriously injured, because there would always be India to fall back upon for the disposal of surplus products. But the Hindoos are becoming so proficient in manufacturing themselves, and the cost of labor in that country so low, that they are not only holding their own against British manufactures in India, but are carrying on a severe competition with the English in China and Japan. In the six years from 1876 to 1881 inclusive, British exports of yarn to China, Hong Kong and Japan were 232,304,895 pounds, while India exported about one-half that amount. From 1882 to 1887 inclusive the figures were reversed, India exporting to China and Japan more than double the amount of the English exports to those countries. The four years succeeding 1887 showed a further proportionate decline in English and increase in Indian exports. The British, therefore, admit that Indian rivalry is becoming serious, in some directions at least. The Indian manufacturers, whose mills run night and day, without any limit as to hours, are not likely to neglect the American field when thrown open to their enterprises. As the Indian operatives work for wages that are not one-tenth of the amount earned by American operatives it should be needless to say that the Indian goods would speedily drive American goods out of the market.

GRADUALLY the possibilities of Alaska's resources are coming to light. The Rev. P. Tosi, general superior of the Catholic missions in the northwestern section of the territory, has furnished the agricultural department with the results of some interesting experiments which the missionaries have made with staple agricultural products. Far up the Yukon, at the mission of Nulato, Father Tosi succeeded in raising fine turnips and lettuce in the season of 1888. At the Holy Cross mission, 250 miles from the mouth of the same river, a variety of vegetables were successfully raised in 1891. In the garden of the mission the fathers grew 2000 fine heads of cabbage, twenty bushels of potatoes from a quarter acre plot, seventy bushels of turnips, some of them of extraordinary size, and satisfactory quantities of radishes, beets, carrots and chicory. Onions, beans and corn were less successful. It is necessary to clear away the heavy coating of moss, averaging from ten to eighteen inches deep, in order to get at the surface of the ground. Father Tosi found that cattle can be successfully kept in Alaska, though horses would be entirely useless from the nature of the country. It is gratifying to know that the interior of our great northwestern possession is capable of supplying food for those who eventually will utilize its timber and mineral wealth, even if agriculture is not so profitable there as in some other portions of the country.

WHALEBONE IN PILES

A MILLION DOLLARS' WORTH STORED IN ONE BUILDING.

How the Precious Stuff Is Guarded—Great Care Is Necessary in the Handling of the Product—Whalebone Is Very Valuable Nowadays.

In a little brick and stone structure on the Potrero shore of the bay there is a million dollars' worth of whalebone stored, and it is guarded as jealously as if it were so many twenty dollar gold pieces or its weight in precious stones. It is the property of the Pacific Steam Whaling company and came off the whaling barks Beluga, Mary D. Hume, Agnnor and America, in from the arctic.

The building is a perfect vault with brick and stone sides, iron roof and iron doors. All around the top runs a perforated pipe by means of which the whole interior could be flooded if a fire should by any possibility break out. Rats are thick on the water front and can do a great deal of damage to a cargo of whalebone, so small iron doors have been put in to answer as barricades when the big ones are opened to air the place. Oilskins such as the fire patrol use are spread over the cargo as the final additional precaution that human ingenuity can suggest.

The uninitiated on first stepping into the cold, cheerless place, with its damp cement floor, are apt to wonder why it has all been done. The long black stalks don't look like much piled against the walls, and to hear their immense value set forth is enough to take the breath away. But the place does not always contain a $1,000,000 stock. The season was a most profitable one and in consequence the warehouse is nearly full.

"The lady purchasing a few sticks of whalebone on her shopping tour scarcely realizes the immense risk and the great amount of labor necessary to place it on the counter," said W. R. Wand, one of the representatives of the whaling company. "There is a big risk even here. We can take no chances. In the rough, after a simple polishing, the bone is worth five dollars a pound, and we have at least 200,000 pounds on hand now. When the vessel docks at the wharf yonder we pitch in and work day and night until the cargo is housed here, and then we try to get it off on the railroad as soon as possible. While it is here this little structure is guarded day and night. A million dollars is something of a responsibility, I can assure you."

"Where does most of the bone go?" was asked.

"A great deal of it goes to New York," replied Mr. Wand, "but most of the cutting is done in Paris and at Bremen. A little is done in London. We polish it off here, get the color, assort it out and put it up in bundles. Then it is forced through to its destination as rapidly as possible. You see, the bone with a light or pearl shade is worth more than the blank and we have to separate it."

Several of the bundles bore the mark M. D. H. in a diamond. "That," said Mr. Wand, "is the name of the vessel from which the bone was taken, in this instance the Mary D. Hume, a vessel which brought the most valuable cargo ever received from the arctic seas. One or two of these bundles are marked 'cut,' you observe. That is to guide the buyer when the bone is offered for sale. It signifies that the bone is nicked on some portion of it. The value is greatly reduced, and we must therefore handle the cargo like eggs. If roughly handled a cargo of whalebone can be well nigh ruined. The slightest cut in a stalk brings it down in value about one-half.

"The bone you know is the teeth of the whale, and a fair sized front molar is worth about fifty dollars. In every whale's jaw there are 470 teeth, and one good sized head is worth a good deal of money. On the last trip the men on the Jessie D. Freeman brought one big fellow alongside, the head of which produced 3,000 pounds of bone. The mouth of the whale is simply a huge suction pump. The monster travels along with his mouth wide open on the surface. The only food he will take is a little red bit of animal life that floats on the northern seas. He sucks in enough to make a good mouthful, and then ejects the water. The food is sifted down through the soft teeth, and is filtered like a lot of sawdust would be in a sieve.

"This black hair that fringes the bone has a separate value. It is cut from the teeth and is used for making fine furniture. It has become so valuable, however, that it cannot be used to any great extent."

"When do you expect to ship this cargo off?"

"As soon as ever Providence will let us. It is something extraordinary for us to have such an enormously valuable load here, and we won't hold it a day longer than necessary, I can assure you!"

"Ever troubled by thieves?"

"No," was the laughing response. "The bone is a trifle too heavy to run away with and the place is too well guarded. Fire is the greatest danger, and you can see how that has been guarded against."

Out in the bay six of the most unsightly ships that ever huddled together in port were tossing. Put up at auction the lot would scarcely bring its value in old lumber, but those hulks brought in as valuable a freight as many a treasure ship has been laden with.—San Francisco Chronicle.

"Swede Violets."

"About the best thing I've heard this season," said a veteran actor on the Thespian corner of Broadway, "was in Omaha a short time ago. There are a great many Swedes out there and they were getting up a celebration of the anniversary of the founding of the Order of the Sons of Sweden. A committee of the order called upon Gus Heege, who was playing there in 'Yon Yonson' at the time, and invited him to take part. They asked him incidentally what they'd better sing.

"'Swede Violets,'" said Gus promptly.—New York Herald.

When a Man's Advice Was Good.

He who had much occasion to be abroad on the day when the snow, rain and wind made merry with the population of this town saw some queer sights and heard some queer things. One of the worst crossings in the lower part of the city was at the intersection of Broadway and Fulton street, where the slush and snow formed an expanse of something which told nothing of the depth of the mixture. Here and there was a hummock which might furnish solid footing, but probably wouldn't. A young man, essaying the crossing, stopped half way between the curbs, and deciding that the rest of the ford was impassable turned back. As he did so he ran into an elderly woman who was close behind him.

"Beg pardon, madam," said he, "but you'd better not try it."

The lady gave her skirts an extra twitch and glared at the youth.

"I want you to know," she responded, "that I never needed a man's advice, and I don't need it now. Lemme by."

The young man jumped to one side, and she who would not be befriended went ahead. There was a splash, a half smothered cry, a wild scramble, and she stood on the sidewalk. But the slush had come above the tops of her stout walking shoes. Grimly she looked back at her adviser, and the wind brought her remark to his ears:

"I never took a man's advice, but I wish I had that time," she said.—New York Times.

Both Parties Pleased.

A Portland lawyer says that not long ago a man came into his office thoroughly angry—as men usually are when they go on such errands. He had called upon a debtor and asked him politely for the payment of a bill of $3.50 and had been abused for his pains. Now he wanted the lawyer to collect it.

The lawyer demurred. The amount was too trifling. It would cost the whole of it to collect it.

"No matter," said the client. "I don't care if I don't get a cent, so long as that fellow has to pay it."

So the lawyer wrote the debtor a letter, and in due time the latter appeared in high dudgeon. He didn't owe any $3.50, and he wouldn't pay it.

"Very well," said the lawyer, "then my instructions are to sue. But I hardly think it will pay you to stand a suit for so small a sum."

"Who'll get the money if I pay it?" asked the man.

The lawyer was obliged to confess that he should.

"Oh, well," said the debtor, "that's another matter. If Mr. —— isn't going to get it, I am perfectly willing to pay it."

The debt was paid, the lawyer pocketed the amount, and, what is very unusual, all parties to the suit were perfectly satisfied.—Portland Argus.

Mediums In Japan.

Spirit rapping vocation for women in Japan requires little apparatus. Rapping is perhaps not the correct word, for there is really no "rapping" at all—the clients are simply put in communication with any spirit with whom they desire to speak. It is not necessary that the spirit should be that of a dead person, but the medium always inquires whether the spirit whose presence is desired is living or dead.

The mediums always carry about with them a mysterious wooden box, about a foot or less square. Like the medicine bag of the Indian medicine man, its contents are a secret to members of the same profession. These women usually have a bow of soft wood strung with a single string, and this they twang on the edge of the box like a caricature of violin playing.

If the spirit required is that of a dead person, a leaf plucked from a graveyard is used to splash some water out of a small cup that stands in front of the medium. If the person is living, a similar ceremony is performed with a piece of stick instead of a leaf. Then follows an incantation, and the spirit proceeds to speak through the medium. The medium charges sometimes as high as 15 or 20 cents.—San Francisco Call.

What the College Gymnasium Does.

The college gymnasium is a place not for the production only of studious athletes, but of athletic students. A place where an hour's varied exercise, a run, a spray and a rub down can be had regularly, and where a man may turn his thoughts wholly from books and studies for awhile by a bout at fencing, or boxing, or by a game in the bowling alley, or in the handball court, from which he can get increased capacity for greater and better endeavors. Kept within its proper sphere, it is as necessary for the symmetrical and complete development of the young "scholar in politics" as is the mathematical recitation, the historical lecture or the debating society, and it is as legitimate.—Harper's Weekly.

Drawbacks In Acting.

It is sometimes hard work to be an actor, for the thumping and pulling and hauling that a person may have to undure in an exciting scene are sometimes more than a mere show. Miss Selina Fetter had to give up her part in "The Henrietta" because she was injured by the fall required of her in every performance of that piece. A young leading man who has been playing Orlando in "As You Like It" for three nights is raw from wrists to elbows in consequence of the thumps, slides and falls endured at the hands of a brawny athlete in the wrestling scene.—New York Sun.

To Find Out Your Future Husband.

At bedtime, having fasted since noon, two girls who wish to obtain a sight of their future husbands boil an egg, which must be the first egg ever laid by the hen, in a pan in which no egg has ever been boiled before. Having boiled it until it is hard they eat it in two with something that has never been used as a knife before. Each girl eats her half and then left to the last fragment, speaking no word the while. Then, still in silence, they walk backward to bed, "to sleep, perchance to dream."—"English Folk Customs."

Officeholders Who Pay Rent.

Governor Leon Abbett, who was informally nominated for senator from New Jersey by Governor Elect Werts at the Democratic society's dinner in Jersey City a few evenings ago, has a law office on Broadway opposite the postoffice. The sign is on the stairs and on the door, but "Leon Abbett, Lawyer," is very seldom inside. Callers are informed that the governor is in Trenton, or that the governor is in Jersey City, or elsewhere in New York, or in some other part of New Jersey. Many other out of town officeholders have offices on Broadway. Railroad Commissioner Chapin's law office is in the Corbin building. He drops in occasionally, but one cannot find him unless he makes an appointment.

Mayor Boody, of Brooklyn, is a member of a banking firm. He keeps an eye on his business, but does not go to his office regularly. Commissioner of City Works Adams, of Brooklyn, has a law office in this city, and finds time to drop in and pass the time of day with the office boy occasionally. It is estimated that upward of 600 officeholders and others are paying rent for offices which they do not occupy. It's a good thing for the landlords.—New York Advertiser.

The Dedicatory Ode.

Departing from the precedent established when the preliminary arrangement for the recent dedicatory ceremonies were made, it has been decided to pass by the younger aspirants for the laurel wreath and request the veteran Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes to furnish an appropriate ode for the May Day celebration of the opening of the exposition. It seems to be the universal opinion of the directors and of the commissioners that the last number of America's first school of great writers should be paid this compliment.

After Miss Harriet Monroe had been commissioned to prepare the dedicatory ode, and until the young lady had herself disarmed criticism, many harsh things were said of the committee's action. In this case it will be impossible for the most exacting to find fault with the choice. This has been the idea of those who have made the decision. No direct promise has been received from Dr. Holmes, still it is understood that if the request is made he will consent to give the exposition. It is also said that he will make the ode his final work.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

BACHELOR'S HALL.

"Here's the house, from dome to base,
Standing in a sunny place;
Rooms there are a half a score;
Tiled or polished is each floor;
Everything contrived to please—
Perfect, as you see, for ease."
"Yes, but where's the mistress?"

"Here are parlors, sitting rooms,
Scented by sweet jasmine blooms;
Halls there are, and chambers, too,
Elegant and furnished new;
Storeroom with its ample store,
Kitchen, pantry and, what's more"—
"Yes, but where's the mistress?"

"Here's the servant's brief brigade—
Irish cook and serving maid,
Housekeeper—I think that's all
Save the chore boy, close on call;
Not a servant on the place
With a sour, unfriendly face."
"Yes, but where's the mistress?"

"I'm the master; look me o'er;
And, besides, I've gold galore;
Business with the Bryson bank,
Where my credits are not blank—
Takes a deal, 'twixt you and I,
For the house and our supply."
"Yes, but where's the mistress?"

"Now see here, my eager friend,
That insistent quiz should end;
What has not yet come about
May before the year is out.
Still my heart feels no distress,
And I'll live without, unless
Cupid sends a mistress."
—Edward Vincent in Good Housekeeping.

The Civilization of Europe.

I see that Professor Petrie in his latest work advances the theory that Europe is not indebted to Egypt for its civilization. The discovery has been rather late coming on the part of the archeologist. I have long maintained that Egypt borrowed fully as much of her civilization from Europe as did Europe from Egypt. European civilization was really an independent growth. Egypt and Babylonia borrowed fully as much as they loaned. This European civilization acquired acts independently, just as India did.

More than 1,500 years before the dawn of the Christian era civilization had made considerable progress in Greece and Lybia. A century later witnessed great proficiency in the arts. Moreover, this civilization was not confined to a corner of Europe, but stretched from the Mediterranean to the frozen north. Egypt and Babylonia did not civilize Greece and Italy. Greece and Italy did not civilize the rest of Europe. They only ranked for a time as the farthest advanced in civilization. It was an indigenous development. At last the archaeologists are stumbling onto this fact, long patent to the careful student, and the knowledge appears to surprise them wonderfully.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Bringing Out Receptions.

The fashion of bringing out a girl by means of an evening reception instead of an afternoon tea seems to be gaining ground. It has the merit of being more distinctive at all events, as there are not many houses in New York that could stand the crush of an evening affair if the invitations were as general as those for a tea.

Where a tea is given for the purpose of introducing a debutante to society, it is becoming an unwritten law that those of her friends who have been invited to receive with her should remain afterward either to dinner or (as was done very successfully in the case of one young lady lately) for a sit down supper, a number of young men being asked to stay after the reception in informal fashion.

The dress of those who "assist" should not be too elaborate, as it is the debutante that should be the cynosure of all eyes. It is in better taste, therefore, for her friends to consider this and to wear less conspicuous gowns themselves.—New York Letter.

The Bergamot Tree.

There is but one spot in the world where the bergamot tree can be cultivated with profit—a fact of some importance, since its essence is indispensable in the manufacture of numerous perfumes and medical preparations. The spot referred to is Reggio, in Calabria, that extremity of the Italian peninsula which is familiarly known as "the toe of the boot." Mr. Kerrich suggests that there is a good chance here for enterprising capitalists of getting a highly profitable monopoly of the bergamot tree by buying up from the producers all that they extract. At present the Reggio bergamot suffers both in quality and reputation through the frauds of small traders, who, it is said, mix it with ten parts of adulterating matter.—Chicago Tribune.

"Dead Man Claim."

"Dead Man Claim," the name given to a rich mine in Leadville, was discovered by a broken down miner while digging a grave. A miner died when there were several feet of snow on the ground. His comrades laid his body in a snowbank and hired a man for twenty dollars to dig a grave. Forgetting the corpse and his bargain, he thought only of the fact that he had struck it rich.—Chicago Herald.

Persecuted to Work.

While in Cajamarca in the Cordilleras I was sitting with my hosts one evening at the door of their house. Suddenly there was a great noise in the quiet street, and a horseman rode up. It was a friend of the family, who was on his way to settle an account with a troublesome debtor. When we heard that a creditor would hardly be ordinarily received at such an hour, he touched something hanging on the pommel of his saddle, and said that he had something there which would settle the matter.

His debtor was an Indian who lived not far away in the country, and who had promised to make for him 300 or 400 large adobe bricks in payment for some small services which he had purchased two years before. He seemed perfectly willing to fulfill his contract, and when every day was reminded of it would promise to be on hand the next day; but he never appeared.

The merchant was repairing his house, and according to the custom of the country had taken the law into his own hands. An hour after he [illegible] us he returned, calling out triumphantly: "Well, I have my [illegible]

About the Horses.

It is a white and dreary plain. There is a line of straggling gum trees beside a feeble water course.

Six wild horses—brumbies, as they are called—have been driven down, corralled and caught. They have fed on the leaves of the myall and stray bits of salt bush. After a time they are got within the traces.

They are all young and they look not so bad. We start. They can scarcely be held in for the first few miles. Then they begin to soak in perspiration. Another five miles and they look drawn about the flanks, and what we thought was flesh is dripping from them.

Another five, and the flesh has gone. The ribs show, the shoulders protrude. Look! A poler's heels are knocking against the whiffletree. It is twenty miles now. There is a gulp in your throat as you see a wreck stagger out of the traces and stumble over the plain, head near the ground and death upon its back. There is no water in that direction, worn out creature.

It comes upon you like a sudden blow. These horses are being driven to death. And why? Because it is cheaper to kill them on this stage of thirty miles than to feed them with chaff at $250 a ton.

And now another sways. Look at the throbbing sides, the quivering limbs. He falls.

"Driver, for heaven's sake, can't you see?"

"I do; so help me God, I do. But we've got to get there. I'll let them out at another mile."

And you are an Anglo-Saxon, and this is a Christian land.—"Round the Compass in Australia."

Effected a Compromise.

In a certain Maine town lives a man who for many years has been engaged in the grocery business, but receiving a good offer he sold out to a younger man and retired to private life. But the ruling passion was too strong to let him long be idle, so he commenced building a store on his land, which adjoined that of the Methodist church. For a time everything went harmoniously and the new store neared a state of completion. But just at this point up came one of the trustees of the church and said: "Your store sets over on our land one foot and it will have to be moved." This rather staggered the prospective grocer, and he retired to ponder over the question and study the deeds of his land and test the measurements.

In doing this he discovered that the back of the church rested over on his side of the line three feet. Armed with this new argument he said to the church owners, "If you will move your church three feet I will move my store one." This view of the case was a new one to the church authorities, but recognizing its force they made all haste to effect a compromise.—Lewiston Journal.

Not the Weaker Sex.

To refer to women as the weaker sex, a German scientist says, is surely a mistake, for they have always known how to preserve their dominion over the so called stronger sex. Men are indeed women's most obedient slaves. Solomon said his wives were bitterer than death, and surely there never was a greater slave to woman. Statistics show that seven wives survive every ten famous men. Heloise survived the loss of her beloved Abelard twenty-two years, and similarly the wife of Washington, though she declared she could never get over the death of her husband, outlived him thirty years.—San Francisco Argonaut.

Buried Wealth in France.

In Normandy the English conquest in the Fifteenth century, followed by their ultimate expulsion, has given rise to many traditions of buried treasure, which the least superstitious attribute to the English. Throughout France the Revolution, without doubt, gave occasion to many secret hoards, the owners of which may well have perished in the massacres and proscriptions of the Reign of Terror.—All the Year Round.

Ancient and Modern Fashions.

Dr. Julien Chisholm says that there are engraved stones and monuments in the British museum which prove that the present fashion, both in dress and headgear, is almost identical with that of the women of Babylon at about the time of the flood.—St. Louis Republic.

Are Scott and Dickens Obsolete?

Who reads Scott and Dickens now? To that question what is the true answer? The implied answer of course is that no one reads them or that their readers are getting yearly fewer. It may be said at once, and it may be said flatly, that it is not the case. They are not only still read by many people, but they are read by more people today than they ever were before. This fact is substantiated by the copies of their works that are sold; indeed it stares us in the face at every railway book store.

Scott and Dickens, if measured by the number of their readers, are growing in popularity, not declining. I should certainly say that, so far as my own observation can inform me, no two writers are more universally familiar at this moment than Scott and Dickens. The old have read them; the young are reading them, nor need any one doubt the fact because they are not discussed like novelties.—W. H. Mallock in Forum.

A Famous Expression.

"There's many a slip 'twixt the cup and the lip" is a very old saying, and was first uttered to the king of Samos, an island in the Grecian archipelago. This king, Ancæus by name, planted a vineyard and treated the slaves who cultivated it so badly that one of them told him he would never live to taste the wine made from it. When the wine was ready and a cup of it poured out for the king he sent for the slave who had prophesied his death, and asked him what he thought of his prophecy now.

The slave replied, "There's many a slip 'twixt the cup and the lip," and just as he had spoken the words Ancæus received warning that a wild boar had broken into his vineyard and was ruining it. Putting down the wine untasted, he rushed out to attack the boar and was killed.—Harper's Young People.

Athletics and Corsets.

Miss Homans, the head of the Normal School of Gymnastics in Boston, gives in a recent interview these statistics concerning the influence of athletics upon dress. "Two years ago," she says, "out of a class of thirty-seven there were but two of the young women at the end of the school year who continued to wear corsets, and no one continued to wear French heels. Last year out of a class of seventy-one seven-eighths [illegible]

AN IDEAL IDLENESS.

A SUMMER DAY IN MOSS GROWN WOODS BY A BABBLING BROOK.

Thoughts Suggested by an Afternoon in Midsummer Spent in the Shade of Growing Trees on a Couch of Nature's Down. Tireless Nature Never Rests.

It is a warm day in midsummer, and a fisherman is following along a trout brook. The stream runs through the forest—through hardwood groves, which, owing to their scant underbrush, look almost like English parks; through mossy evergreen glades, where every sound and color is subdued; through rocky ravines, down which the water hurries with fretful plaints against the boulders in its path, till at last it finds an outlet in a mountain lake.

Today it is evident that all the wood life is prepared to be lazy—even the trout that are wont to rush so eagerly at worm or fly. Now the fisherman begins to feel the influence of this all pervading inertia, and finally he lays down his pole and stretches himself out on the brook's bank. Close to his side is a squad of rippling water, cool and soothing, while the spreading top of a maple keeps off the sun.

The bank here is covered with thick moss—a pleasant couch waiting for some one to come and use it. In the economy of the woods nothing is permitted to exist for itself only; the saplings have their own life, but must also furnish leaves and twigs to the deer, and bark to the nibbling hares. No plant or animal is entirely selfish, and so this humble moss, since it can do little else, is ready to serve as a resting place for the weary.

There is an old saying that goes, "Best ease is free ease"—or the ease bought with too much labor of preparation is hardly worth having. And this thought, though it may not be very profound, suggests one great delight of the woods, everything is free—is natural. No one has ached, no back has become bent, in the making of this couch of moss; no hands have toiled to rear the grateful shade of the maple. The refreshing splash and ripple of the brook is freely, unconsciously given.

The voluptuaries of the east were close students of the art of idleness. Lounging on their cushions, they listened to soft music and watched the movements of dancing slaves. Other slaves waved cooling fans, and, if their masters were exposed to the sun, held silken canopies above them. The eastern prince thought that the pleasures of idleness could be no further perfected.

But the dancers must often have grown weary; the slaves holding the canopies fainted in the sun; the fan bearers and the musicians doubtless wondered at the unjust fate which condemned them to labor in order that others might enjoy. No Indian rajah or Persian lord ever reclined upon an easier couch than this one on which the fisherman stretches himself. The brook makes the most delightful of music. Sunbeams dancing on leaf and moss and ripples are as pleasant to watch as the movement of weary slaves.

Nor do the sights and sounds of the woods lack variety. The music of the water is mingled with the twitter of forest birds—thrushes and wood sparrows; the songful enthusiasm of their annual youth is past, but the midsummer notes are full of happiness, and tell of nests well stocked with little ones. Squirrels chirp and chatter. The dead leaves strewing the ground are of every shade of brown and red and yellow, and the slender shafts of sunlight, which dart down through the breeze stirred foliage overhead, never fall twice upon colors that are exactly similar.

The tired fisherman, half dreamy, half observant, and wholly happy, lies him there till the long, warm summer afternoon is drawing to a close. The shy little wood creatures that love the dusk come out of their hiding places and run near him, quite fearless of his motionless figure. Delicate, mouselike creatures are here, the flying squirrels, in soft gray draperies. A mink trots over the wet bowlders in the brook's bed, and, conscious of its own importance, eyes the man suspiciously.

Darkness is coming on, and it is time for the tired fisherman to go home. He leaves the mossy bank regretfully, half persuaded that idleness, and not work, is man's chief blessing.—Francis S. Palmer in Christian Union.

A Bride of Two Years.

England can furnish instances of child marriages, not perhaps to any great extent, but as young as any to be found in eastern countries, where such marriages are almost of daily occurrence. The youngest English bride on record is, beyond all doubt, a daughter of Sir William Brereton, who in the Sixteenth century was united in bonds of holy matrimony, when only two years of age, to a bridegroom who was only her senior by one year. In this case the children were carried into the church, and their elders spoke for them. Subsequently, when the pair reach years of maturity, they ratified the strange tie. In this instance the object was to carry out a desire to unite property.—All the Year Round.

For Towing a Few Hundred Miles.

In April, 1888, the engines of the steamship California, from Hamburg for New York, broke down when the vessel was about fifty-six miles southeast of Nantucket shoals and 300 miles east of this city. She was towed to this port by the freighter Chateau Margaux, bound from New York to Bordeaux. The latter was awarded $15,000 salvage.—New York Evening Sun.

Indians and Japanese.

The Indians of the interior have nothing in common with those of the western coast. They lack the small feet, almond eyes, coarse, heavy black hair, short stature and timidity that mark the coast Indian as coming from Japan.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

A HYPNOTIC IMPOSTER.

An Englishman Who Could Do Many Things For Teachers of Hypnotism.

The subject who came to me had been a shining light in the profession, and I have reason to know that he was exceptionally gifted. He had performed to crowded houses under several great artists at the Aquarium, and elsewhere in London and the provinces. He had figured at select seances of scientific hypnotists. He had been privately operated on by medical men anxiously seeking after truth. And, by his own statement, he had humbugged them all. What proof had I, then, that he was not humbugging me? Ample proof. He offered, in the first place, to do under my direction everything which he had done in public and private seances when under supposed hypnotic control. I contemplated, in the first instance, accepting this offer and giving a demonstration to a select circle, and it was solely owing to myself that this was not done.

A Remarkable Decision.

The decision of the New York courts the other day in favor of the Godeys, granting them the right to illustrate their new style dresses by printing representations of them on the figures of prominent society women, whose faces are so well reproduced that one cannot but recognize them, will strike terror to the hearts of prominent women in the north and everywhere, but if the law says it's right it's right, and that is all there is to be said about it. If your face appears in a fashion magazine over a dress pattern of a gymnasium suit, a full dress costume, or anything else the fashion designer cares to represent in the line of women's clothes, all you can do is just "to grin and bear it" and say nothing at all.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

An Amusing Newspaper Blunder.

Edmund Yates writes: "One of the most amusing newspaper blunders I have recently met with occurred in connection with the manifestations at Brussels. On the line of the route followed by the procession stands a marble statue of General Belliard, a Frenchman, who fought at Waterloo and died in 1832. Somebody placed a universal suffrage placard in his hand. Upon this the Paris papers, misled by a telegram, announced that the insurgents had attacked the king's escort, seized General Belliard and forced him to carry a seditious handbill against his will."

New York at the Fair.

The four statues which will occupy niches in front of the New York state building at the World's fair are of Christopher Columbus, Hendrick Hudson, George Clinton, the first governor of this state, and Roswell P. Flower, the present executive.—Buffalo Express.

THE virus of Faheyism is already permeating the whole body politic.

GROVER is acting as though he'd just as leave bite a slice of cold Turkey as not.

THE Esquimaux at Chicago are all broken out with the measles, and it is all the managers of the show can do to prevent them from breaking out for their own country.

LOS ANGELES claims to have nearly everything on the earth, including a brand new anarchists' organization. And something is liable to pop down there at any time.

SAN PEDRO and Santa Monica are still quarreling over the appropriation for a deep water harbor, and as a consequence both places are liable to be left high and dry by the roaring surf.

MUNICIPAL politics were clean and decent in Fresno until he board of trustees became Triangulated and jobbery became its rule of action. Faheyism is the muck in which has grown the harvest of shame and disgrace which the city is reaping.

THERE is widespread disappointment over the fact that Boss Fahey failed to accept the challenge of Laborer Mernin for literary contest. There has not been a circus or successful comedy in town for some time, and public expectation was raised to a high pitch. It is a sad disappointment.

EDWARD ATKINSON when spoken of for office rather unnecessarily declined. He did not want a place with a "beggarly $4000 or $5000 a year." Yet Mr. Atkinson's chief delight, and the circumstances upon which his fame as a statistician rests, is an ability to show by figures—always unanswerable—how a man can rear a family and be so happy on 90 cents per day that to wish for more is an evidence of sinful greed.—Examiner.

It is almost unnecessary to add that Mr. Atkinson is one of the most enthusiastic free traders in this country. He has figured out to the fraction of a cent how a laboring man and a big family can live in comfort on 90 cents a day, but of course for the class to which he belongs four or five thousand a year is a mere bagatelle.

Every reasonable, patriotic and honest citizen must admit the necessity of a change. The opponents of the Triangle are pledged by the Republican platform to go back to the liberal and decent political methods of former administrations. In the fulfillment of that obligation they will be required to take the fire department out of politics and to select men for public positions on account of their fitness rather than their political services. This pledge cannot and must not be disregarded.

The good name and reputation of Fresno as well as her material interests are at stake in Monday's election. Any citizen who is inclined on account of political or other prejudices to vote for a perpetuation of the past administration should seriously consider his duty to the city and his fellow citizens before casting his ballot. When he does that, he cannot vote for the Triangle.

IT was expected that the organ of the Triangle would spring something remarkable in its last issue before the election, and it did. That column roorback about printing deputy sheriff badges in order to put them on illegal voters, is probably the most extraordinary thing that ever appeared in the columns of a newspaper printed in an intelligent community. The only question which it creates is whether the paper has lapsed into absolute idiocy, or whether it believes it is addressing itself to a community of imbeciles, who could be led to believe that an official badge of any sort could be used by an illegal voter for a passport at the polls. Such a miserable, ridiculous and shameless falsehood could only have originated in a newspaper which is supporting the cause and methods of candidates whose official record it has denounced in unqualified terms. Its mendacity is too apparent to even require contradicting. The only truth stated in that entire column of verbose falsehood is that such badges have been printed. That is no secret, nor intended to be such. They are in the sheriff's office, ready for use in any emergency which may occur. That they will be required we have no doubt. It is an open secret that a program of bulldozing and intimidation in the interests of the Triangle candidates has been fully arranged, and that unless prevented by the strong arms of the law honest citizens and legal voters who are opposed to the perpetuation of that power will be subjected to insult and brutal treatment, while the imported voters of the Triangle will be unmolested. If there had heretofore been any doubt that such infamous program would be attempted, the use of members of the police force for the purpose of intimidation and other disreputable political work, would set the question at rest. Sheriff Scott has simply done his official duty in making preparations to preserve the peace and protect honest citizens in this city on next Monday. Had he not done so, he would have failed to perform his plain duty as it is pointed out and made unmistakable by existing conditions.

THE RESULT IMPORTANT.

Before another issue of this paper, the municipal election will have occurred, and questions of vital importance to the city will have been determined The contest has necessarily been an unpleasant one, and there will be a universal feeling of relief when it is over.

Political campaigns, at best, come too frequently for the comfort of the community, and when, as in this instance, public officials are candidates who are politicians of the order of ward bosses, whose official acts, in the language of their newspaper organ, have been at all times in defiance of public opinion and the interests of the community, the objectionable features of the campaign naturally become intensified, and assume the character of an unqualified nuisance in the minds of decent and peace-loving citizens. With politicians of the Fahey stripe in the field as candidates for places of honor and responsibility, however, nothing different can be expected; but if their selfish and dangerous ambitions are defeated the universal verdict will be that the result of the contest amply repays for all the discomfort and disquiet which it has occasioned.

With the record of the Triangle aspirants so fully impressed upon the public mind it is unnecessary at this late day to recount the reasons which should insure their defeat. It is only necessary in passing to recall to the mind of the voter that ever since the time the present council opened proceedings by allowing themselves three times the amount for their services as an equalizing board than their predecessors had received, there has been a series of political and other jobs worked through the board, to the undeniable detriment of the business of the city and the safety of the public treasury.

The fire department was disrupted and turned into a political machine, and the chronic hungry disposition for the letting of contracts involving large amounts is sufficiently illustrated in their determined, expensive but futile efforts to take the building of the high school out of the hands of the school board and handle the funds of the school districts. More recently the squandering of $5000 in worse than useless gutter plastering and the letting of that contract for $1000 more than the lowest bid, is an example of the established precedent of letting contracts to the highest bidder, in matters where the law was not entirely ignored and work involving many hundred dollars farmed out to political or business favorites.

Undoubtedly one of the principal rivals of American workingmen in the American market, as soon as the new tariff throws open this market to foreign competition, will be India. British manufacturers are already dismayed by the development of Indian industries, and by the facts and figures showing that India is rapidly equiring control of the eastern markets, so far as the supply of cotton goods is concerned. Up to recent time it was the boast of British spinners and manufacturers that whatever tariffs might be imposed on cotton goods by other nations, the British cotton trade could not be seriously injured, because there would always be India to fall back upon for the disposal of surplus products. But the Hindoos are becoming so proficient in manufacturing themselves, and the cost of labor in that country so low, that they are not only holding their own against British manufactures in India, but are carrying on a severe competition with the English in China and Japan. In the six years from 1876 to 1881 inclusive, British exports of yarn to China, Hong Kong and Japan were 232,304,896 pounds, while India exported about one-half that amount. From 1882 to 1887 inclusive the figures were reversed, India exporting to China and Japan more than double the amount of the English exports to those countries. The four years succeeding 1887 showed a further proportionate decline in English and increase in Indian exports. The British, therefore, admit that Indian rivalry is becoming serious, in some directions at least. The Indian manufacturers, whose mills run night and day, without any limit as to hours, are not likely to neglect the American field, when thrown open to their enterprise. As the Indian operatives work for wages that are not one-fifth of the amount earned by American operatives it should be needless to say that the Indian goods would speedily drive American goods out of the market.

GRADUALLY the possibilities of Alaska's resources are coming to light. The Rev. P. Tosi, general superior of the Catholic missions in the northwestern section of the territory, has furnished the agricultural department with the results of some interesting experiments which the missionaries have made with staple agricultural products. Far up the Yukon, at the mission of Nulato, Father Tosi succeeded in raising fine turnips and lettuce in the season of 1889. At the Holy Cross mission, 250 miles from the mouth of the same river, a variety of vegetables were successfully raised in 1891. In the garden of the mission the fathers grew 2000 fine heads of cabbage, twenty bushels of potatoes from a quarter acre plot, seventy bushels of turnips, some of them of extraordinary size, and satisfactory quantities of radishes, beets, carrots and chicory. Onions, beans and corn were less successful. It is necessary to clear away the heavy coating of moss, averaging from ten to eighteen inches deep, in order to get at the surface of the ground. Father Tosi found that cattle can be successfully kept in Alaska, though horses would be entirely useless from the nature of the country. It is gratifying to know that the interior of our great northwestern possession is capable of supplying food for those who eventually will utilize its timber and mineral wealth, even if agriculture is not so profitable there as in some other portions of the country.

WHALEBONE IN PILES

A MILLION DOLLARS' WORTH STORED IN ONE BUILDING.

How the Precious Stuff Is Guarded—Great Care Is Necessary in the Handling of the Product—Whalebone Is Very Valuable Nowadays.

In a little brick and stone structure on the Potrero shore of the bay there is a million dollars' worth of whalebone stored, and it is guarded as jealously as if it were so many twenty dollar gold pieces or its weight in precious stones. It is the property of the Pacific Steam Whaling company and came off the whaling barks Beluga, Mary D. Hume, Agenor and America, in from the arctic.

The building is a perfect vault with brick and stone sides, iron roof and iron doors. All around the top runs a perforated pipe by means of which the whole interior could be flooded if a fire should by any possibility break out. Rats are thick on the water front and can do a great deal of damage to a cargo of whalebone, so small iron doors have been put in to answer as barricades when the big ones are opened to air the place. Oilskins such as the fire patrol use are spread over the cargo as the final additional precaution that human ingenuity can suggest.

The uninitiated on first stepping into the cold, cheerless place, with its damp cement floor, are apt to wonder why it has all been done. The long black stalks don't look like much piled against the walls, and to hear their immense value set forth is enough to take the breath away. But the place does not always contain a $1,000,000 stock. The season was a most profitable one and in consequence the warehouse is nearly full.

"The lady purchasing a few sticks of whalebone on her shopping tour scarcely realizes the immense risk and the great amount of labor necessary to place it on the counter," said W. R. Wand, one of the representatives of the whaling company. "There is a big risk even here. We can take no chances. In the rough, after a simple polishing, the bone is worth five dollars a pound, and we have at least 200,000 pounds on hand now. When the vessel docks at the wharf yonder we pitch in and work day and night until the cargo is housed here, and then we try to get it off on the railroad as soon as possible. While it is here this little structure is guarded day and night. A million dollars is something of a responsibility, I can assure you."

"Where does most of the bone go?" was asked.

"A great deal of it goes to New York," replied Mr. Wand, "but most of the cutting is done in Paris and at Bremen. A little is done in London. We polish it off here, get the color, assort it out and put it up in bundles. Then it is forced through to its destination as rapidly as possible. You see, the bone with a light or pearl shade is worth more than the black and we have to separate it."

Several of the bundles bore the mark M. D. H. in a diamond. "That," said Mr. Wand, "is the name of the vessel from which the bone was taken, in this instance the Mary D. Hume, a vessel which brought the most valuable cargo ever received from the arctic seas. One or two of these bundles are marked 'cut,' you observe. That is to guide the buyer when the bone is offered for sale. It signifies that the bone is nicked on some portion of it. The value is greatly reduced, and we must therefore handle the cargo like eggs. If roughly handled a cargo of whalebone can be well nigh ruined. The slightest cut in a stalk brings it down in value about one-half.

"The bone you know is the teeth of the whale, and a fair sized front molar is worth about fifty dollars. In every whale's jaw there are 473 teeth, and one good sized head is worth a good deal of money. On the last trip the men on the Jessie D. Freeman brought one big fellow alongside, the head of which produced 2,000 pounds of bone. The mouth of the whale is simply a huge suction pump. The monster travels along with his mouth wide open on the surface. The only food he will take is a little red bit of animal life that floats on the northern seas. He sucks in enough to make a good mouthful, and then ejects the water. The food is sifted down through the soft teeth, and is filtered like a lot of sawdust would be in a sieve.

"This black hair that fringes the bone has a separate value. It is cut from the teeth and is used for making fine furniture. It has become so valuable, however, that it cannot be used to any great extent."

"When do you expect to ship this cargo off?"

"As soon as ever Providence will let us. It is something extraordinary for us to have such an enormously valuable load here, and we won't hold it a day longer than necessary, I can assure you!"

"Ever troubled by thieves?"

"No," was the laughing response. "The bone is a trifle too heavy to run away with and the place is too well guarded. Fire is the greatest danger, and you can see how that has been guarded against."

Out in the bay six of the most unsightly ships that ever huddled together in port were tossing. Put up at auction the lot would scarcely bring its value in old lumber, but those hulks brought in as valuable a freight as many a treasure ship has been laden with.—San Francisco Chronicle.

"Swede Violets."

"About the best thing I've heard this season," said a veteran actor on the Thespian corner of Broadway, "was in Omaha a short time ago. There are a great many Swedes out there and they were getting up a celebration of the anniversary of the founding of the Order of the Sons of Sweden. A committee of the order called upon Gus Heege, who was playing there in 'Yon Yonson' at the time, and invited him to take part. They asked him incidentally what they'd better sing.

"'Swede Violets,'" said Gus promptly. —New York Herald.

When a Man's Advice Was Good.

He who had much occasion to be abroad on the day when the snow, rain and wind made merry with the population of this town saw some queer sights and heard some queer things. One of the worst crossings in the lower part of the city was at the intersection of Broadway and Fulton street, where the slush and snow formed an expanse of something which told nothing of the depth of the mixture. Here and there was a hummock which might furnish solid footing, but probably wouldn't. A young man, essaying the crossing, stopped half way between the curbs, and deciding that the rest of the ford was impassable turned back. As he did so he ran into an elderly woman who was close behind him.

"Beg pardon, madam," said he, "but you'd better not try it."

The lady gave her skirts an extra twitch and glared at the youth.

"I want you to know," she responded, "that I never needed a man's advice, and I don't need it now. Lemme by."

The young man jumped to one side, and she who would not be befriended went ahead. There was a splash, a half smothered cry, a wild scramble, and she stood on the sidewalk. But the slush had gone above the tops of her stout walking shoes. Grimly she looked back at her adviser, and the wind brought her remark to his ears:

"I never took a man's advice, but I wish I had that time," she said.—New York Times.

Both Parties Pleased.

A Portland lawyer says that not long ago a man came into his office thoroughly angry—as men usually are when they go on such errands. He had called upon a debtor and asked him politely for the payment of a bill of $2.50 and had been abused for his pains. Now he wanted the lawyer to collect it.

The lawyer demurred. The amount was too trifling. It would cost the whole of it to collect it.

"No matter," said the client. "I don't care if I don't get a cent, so long as that fellow has to pay it."

So the lawyer wrote the debtor a letter, and in due time the latter appeared in high dudgeon. He didn't owe any $2.50, and he wouldn't pay it.

"Very well," said the lawyer, "then my instructions are to sue. But I hardly think it will pay you to stand a suit for so small a sum."

"Who'll get the money if I pay it?" asked the man.

The lawyer was obliged to confess that he should.

"Oh, well," said the debtor, "that's another matter. If Mr. —— isn't going to get it, I am perfectly willing to pay it."

The debt was paid, the lawyer pocketed the amount, and, what is very unusual, all parties to the suit were perfectly satisfied.—Portland Argus.

Mediums In Japan.

Spirit rapping vocation for women in Japan requires little apparatus. Rapping is perhaps not the correct word; for there is really no "rapping" at all—the clients are simply put in communication with any spirit with whom they desire to speak. It is not necessary that the spirit should be that of a dead person, but the medium always inquires whether the spirit whose presence is desired is living or dead.

The mediums always carry about with them a mysterious wooden box, about a foot or less square. Like the medicine bag of the Indian medicine man, its contents are a secret to members of the same profession. These women usually have a bow of soft wood strung with a single string, and this they twang on the edge of the box like a caricature of violin playing.

If the spirit required is that of a dead person, a leaf plucked from a graveyard is used to splash some water out of a small cup that stands in front of the medium. If the person is living, a similar ceremony is performed with a piece of stick instead of a leaf. Then follows an incantation, and the spirit proceeds to speak through the medium. The medium charges sometimes as high as 15 or 20 cents.—San Francisco Call.

What the College Gymnasium Does.

The college gymnasium is a place not for the production only of studious athletes, but of athletic students. A place where an hour's varied exercise, a run, a spray and a rub down can be had regularly, and where a man may turn his thoughts wholly from books and studies for awhile by a bout at fencing, or boxing, or by a game in the bowling alley, or in the handball court, from which he can get increased capacity for greater and better endeavors. Kept within its proper sphere, it is as necessary for the symmetrical and complete development of the young "scholar in politics" as is the mathematical recitation, the historical lecture or the debating society, and it is as legitimate.—Harper's Weekly.

Drawbacks In Acting.

It is sometimes hard work to be an actor, for the thumping and pulling and hauling that a person may have to endure in an exciting scene are sometimes more than a mere show. Miss Selma Fetter had to give up her part in "The Henrietta" because she was injured by the full required of her in every performance of that piece. A young leading man who has been playing Orlando in "As You Like It" for three nights is raw from wrists to elbows in consequence of the thumps, slides and falls endured at the hands of a brawny athlete in the wrestling scene.—New York Sun.

To Find Out Your Future Husband.

At bedtime, having fasted since noon, two girls who wish to obtain a sight of their future husbands boil an egg, which must be the first egg ever laid by the hen, in a pan in which no egg has ever been boiled before. Having boiled it until it is hard they cut it in two with something that has never been used as a knife before. Each girl eats her half and the shell to the last fragment, speaking no word the while. Then still in silence, they walk backward to bed, "to sleep, perchance to dream."—"English Folk-Rhymes."

Officeholders Who Pay Rent.

Governor Leon Abbett, who was informally nominated for senator from New Jersey by Governor Elect Werts at the Democratic society's dinner in Jersey City a few evenings ago, has a law office on Broadway opposite the postoffice. The sign is on the stairs and on the door, but "Leon Abbett, Lawyer," is very seldom inside. Callers are informed that the governor is in Trenton, or that the governor is in Jersey City, or elsewhere in New York, or in some other part of New Jersey. Many other out of town officeholders have offices on Broadway. Railroad Commissioner Chapin's law office is in the Corbin building. He drops in occasionally, but one cannot find him unless he makes an appointment.

Mayor Boody, of Brooklyn, is a member of a banking firm. He keeps an eye on his business, but does not go to his office regularly. Commissioner of City Works Adams, of Brooklyn, has a law office in this city, and finds time to drop in and pass the time of day with the office boy occasionally. It is estimated that upward of 500 officeholders and others are paying rent for offices which they do not occupy. It's a good thing for the landlords.—New York Advertiser.

The Dedicatory Ode.

Departing from the precedent established when the preliminary arrangements were made, it has been decided to pass by the younger aspirants for the laurel wreath and request the veteran Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes to furnish an appropriate ode for the May Day celebration of the opening of the exposition. It seems to be the universal opinion of the directors and of the commissioners that the last member of America's first school of great writers should be paid this compliment.

After Miss Harriet Monroe had been commissioned to prepare the dedicatory ode, and until the young lady had herself disarmed criticism, many harsh things were said of the committee's action. In this case it will be impossible for the most exacting to find fault with the choice. This has been the idea of those who have made the decision. No direct promise has been received from Dr. Holmes, still it is understood that if the request is made he will consent to serve the exposition. It is also said that he will make the ode his final masterpiece.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

BACHELOR'S HALL

"Here's the house, from dome to base,
Standing in a sunny place;
Rooms there are a half a score;
Tiled or polished is each floor;
Everything contrived to please—
Perfect, as you see, for ease."
"Yes, but where's the mistress?"

"Here are parlors, sitting rooms,
Scented by sweet Japanese blooms;
Halls there are, and chambers, too,
Elegant and furnished new;
Storeroom with its ample store,
Kitchen, pantry and, what's more"——
"Yes, but where's the mistress?"

"Here's the servant's brief brigade—
Irish cook and serving maid,
Housekeeper—I think that's all.
Save the chore boy, close on call;
Not a servant on the place
With a sour, unfriendly face."
"Yes, but where's the mistress?"

"I'm the master; look me o'er;
And, besides, I've gold galore;
Business with the Bryson bank,
Where my credits are not blank—
Takes a deal, 'twixt you and I,
For the house and our supply."
"Yes, but where's the mistress?"

"Now see here, my eager friend,
That insistent quiz should end;
What has not yet come about
May before the year is out.
Still my heart feels no distress,
And I'll live without, unless
Cupid sends a mistress."
—Edward Vincent in Good Housekeeping.

The Civilization of Europe.

I see that Professor Petrie in his latest work advances the theory that Europe is not indebted to Egypt for its civilization. The discovery has been rather late coming on the part of the archeologist. I have long maintained that Egypt borrowed fully as much of her civilization from Europe as did Europe from Egypt. European civilization was really an independent growth. Egypt and Babylonia borrowed fully as much as they loaned. This European civilization acquired acts independently, just as India did.

More than 1,500 years before the dawn of the Christian era civilization had made considerable progress in Greece and Lybia. A century later witnessed great proficiency in the arts. Moreover, this civilization was not confined to a corner of Europe, but stretched from the Mediterranean to the frozen north. Egypt and Babylonia did not civilize Greece and Italy. Greece and Italy did not civilize the rest of Europe. They only ranked for a time as the farthest advanced in civilization. It was an indigenous development. At last the archaeologists are stumbling onto this fact, long patent to the careful student, and the knowledge appears to surprise them wonderfully.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Bringing Out Receptions.

The fashion of bringing out a girl by means of an evening reception instead of an afternoon tea seems to be gaining ground. It has the merit of being more distinctive at all events, as there are not many houses in New York that could stand the crush of an evening affair if the invitations were as general as those for a tea.

When a tea is given for the purpose of introducing a debutante to society, it is becoming an unwritten law that those of her friends who have been invited to receive with her should remain afterward either to dinner or (as was done very successfully in the case of one young lady lately) for a sit down supper, a number of young men being asked to stay after the reception in informal fashion.

The dress of those who "assist" should not be too elaborate, as it is the debutante that should be the cynosure of all eyes. It is in better taste, therefore, for her friends to consider this and to wear less conspicuous gowns themselves.—New York Letter.

The Bergamot Tree.

There is but one spot in the world where the bergamot tree can be cultivated with profit—a fact of some importance, since its essence is indispensable in the manufacture of numerous perfumes and medical preparations. The spot referred to is Reggio, in Calabria, that extremity of the Italian peninsula which is familiarly known as "the toe of the boot." Mr. Korrick suggests that there is a good chance here for enterprising capitalists of getting a highly profitable monopoly of the bergamot tree by buying up from the producers all that they extract. At present the Reggio bergamot suffers both in quality and reputation through the frauds of small traders, who, it is said, mix it with ten parts of adulterating matter.—Chicago Tribune.

"Dead Man Claim."

"Dead Man Claim," the name given to a rich mine in Leadville, was discovered by a broken down miner while digging a grave. A miner died when there were several feet of snow on the ground. His comrades laid his body in a snowbank and hired a man for twenty dollars to dig a grave. Forgetting the corpse and his bargain, he thought only of the fact that he had "struck it rich."—Chicago Herald.

A Speaker's Right.

During the reign of William Rufus shoes were made two feet long and stuffed with tow till they curled like a ram's horn.

Persuaded to Work.

While in Cajamarca in the Cordilleras I was sitting with my host one evening at the door of their house. Suddenly there was a great noise in the quiet street, and a horseman rode up. It was a friend of the family, who was on his way to settle an account with a troublesome debtor. When we hinted that a creditor would hardly be ordinarily received at such an hour, he touched something hanging on the pommel of his saddle, and said that he had something there which would settle the matter.

His debtor was an Indian who lived not far away in the country, and who had promised to make for him 300 or 400 large adobe bricks in payment for some small wares which he had purchased two years before. He seemed perfectly willing to fulfill his contract, and when ever he was reminded of it would promise to be on hand the next day; but he never appeared.

The merchant was repairing his house, and according to the custom of the country had taken the law into his own hands. An hour after he arrived he returned, calling out triumphantly, "Well, I have my about the wrists of an Indian. I shall never forget the captive's impassive face. His strong features, framed in long locks of hair, expressed neither anger nor astonishment—only philosophical submission to fate. The next day at dawn I saw him cheerfully at work with the air of a man who was glad to pay his debts.

Curiously enough, when some time later another man wished to engage his services he declined the offer. He liked his employer and his work and had no desire to better his condition.—Marcel Monnier.

Death to the Horses.

It is a white and dreary plain. There is a line of straggling gum trees beside a feeble water course.

Six wild horses—brombies, as they are called—have been driven down, corralled and caught. They have fed on the leaves of the myall and stray bits of salt bush. After a time they are got within the traces.

They are all young and they look not so bad. We start. They can scarcely be held in for the first few miles. Then they begin to soak in perspiration. Another five miles and they look drawn about the flanks, and what we thought was flesh is dripping from them.

Another five, and the flesh has gone. The ribs show, the shoulders protrude. Look! A poler's heels are knocking against the whiffletree. It is twenty miles now. There is a gulp in your throat as you see a wreck stagger out of the traces and stumble over the plain, head near the ground and death upon its back. There is no water in that direction, worn out creature.

It comes upon you like a sudden blow. These horses are being driven to death. And why? Because it is cheaper to kill them on this stage of thirty miles than to feed them with chaff at $350 a ton.

And now another sways. Look at the throbbing sides, the quivering limbs. He falls.

"Driver, for heaven's sake, can't you see?"

"I do; so help me God, I do. But we've got to get there. I'll let them out at another mile."

And you are an Anglo-Saxon, and this is a Christian land.—"Round the Compass in Australia."

Effected a Compromise.

In a certain Maine town lives a man who for many years has been engaged in the grocery business, but receiving a good offer he sold out to a younger man and retired to private life. But the ruling passion was too strong to let him long be idle, so he commenced building a store on his land, which adjoined that of the Methodist church. For a time everything went harmoniously and the new store neared a state of completion. But just at this point up came one of the trustees of the church and said, "Your store sets over on our land one foot and it will have to be moved." This rather staggered the prospective grocer, and he retired to ponder over the question and study the deeds of his land and test the measurements.

In doing this he discovered that the back of the church rested over on his side of the line three feet. Armed with this new argument he said to the church owners, "If you will move your church three feet I will move my store one." This view of the case was a new one to the church authorities, but recognizing its force they made all haste to effect a compromise.—Lewiston Journal.

Not the Weaker Sex.

To refer to women as the weaker sex, a German scientist says, is surely a mistake, for they have always known how to preserve their dominion over the so called stronger sex. Men are indeed woman's most obedient slaves. Solomon said his wives were bitterer than death, and surely there never was a greater slave to woman. Statistics show that seven wives survive every ten famous men. Heloise survived the loss of her beloved Abelard twenty-two years, and similarly the wife of Washington, though she declared she could never get over the death of her husband, outlived him thirty years.—San Francisco Argonaut.

Buried Wealth in France.

In Normandy the English conquest in the Fifteenth century, followed by their ultimate expulsion, has given rise to many traditions of buried treasure, which the least superstitious attribute to the English. Throughout France the Revolution, without doubt, gave occasion to many secret hoards, the owners of which may well have perished in the massacres and proscriptions of the Reign of Terror.—All the Year Round.

Ancient and Modern Fashions.

Dr. Julien Chisholm says that there are engraved stones and monuments in the British museum which prove that the present fashion, both in dress and headgear, is almost identical with that of the people of Babylon at about the time of the flood.—St. Louis Republic.

Are Scott and Dickens obsolete?

Who reads Scott and Dickens now? To that question what is the true answer? The implied answer of course is that no one reads them or that their readers are getting yearly fewer. It may be said at once, and it may be said flatly, that it is not the case. They are not only still read by many people, but they are read by more people today than they ever were before. This fact is substantiated by the copies of their works that are sold; indeed it stares us in the face at every railway book store.

Scott and Dickens, if measured by the number of their readers, are growing in popularity, not declining. I should certainly say that, so far as my own observation can inform me, no two writers are more universally familiar at this moment than Scott and Dickens. The old have read them; the young are reading them, nor need any one doubt the fact because they are not discussed like novelties.—W. H. Mallock in Forum.

A Famous Expression.

"There's many a slip 'twixt the cup and the lip" is a very old saying, and was first uttered to the king of Samos, an island in the Grecian archipelago. This king, Ancæus by name, planted a vineyard and treated the slaves who cultivated it so badly that one of them told him he would never live to taste the wine made from it. When the wine was ready and a cup of it poured out for the king he sent for the slave who had prophesied his death, and asked him what he thought of his prophecy now.

The slave replied, "There's many a slip 'twixt the cup and the lip," and just as he had spoken the words Ancæus received warning that a wild boar had broken into his vineyard and was ruining it. Putting down the wine untasted, he rushed out to attack the boar and was killed.—Harper's Young People.

Athletics and Corsets.

Miss Homans, the head of the Normal School of Gymnastics in Boston, gives in a recent interview these statistics concerning the influence of athletics upon dress. "Two years ago," she says, "out of a class of thirty-seven there were but two of the young women at the end of the school year who continued to wear corsets, and no one continued to wear French heels. Last year out of a class of seventy-one only eight wore

AN IDEAL IDLENESS.

A SUMMER DAY IN MOSS GROWN WOODS BY A BABBLING BROOK.

Thoughts Suggested by an Afternoon in Midsummer Spent in the Shade of Growing Trees on a Couch of Nature's Down. Tireless Nature Never Rests.

It is a warm day in midsummer, and a fisherman is following along a trout brook. The stream runs through the forest—through hardwood groves, which, owing to their scant underbrush, look almost like English parks; through mossy evergreen glades, where every sound and color is subdued; through rocky ravines, down which the water harries with fretful plaints against the bowlders in its path, till at last it finds an outlet in a mountain lake.

Today it is evident that all the wood life is prepared to be lazy—even the trout that are wont to rush so eagerly at worm or fly. Now the fisherman begins to feel the influence of this all pervading inertia, and finally he lays down his pole and stretches himself out on the brook's bank. Close to his side is a sound of rippling water, cool and soothing, while the spreading top of a maple keeps off the sun.

The bank here is covered with thick moss—a pleasant couch waiting for some one to come and use it. In the economy of the woods nothing is permitted to exist for itself only; the saplings have their own life, but must also furnish leaves and twigs to the deer, and bark to the nibbling hares. No plant or animal is entirely selfish, and so this humble moss, since it can do little else, is ready to serve as a resting place for the weary.

There is an old saying that goes, "Best ease is free ease"—or the ease bought with too much labor of preparation is hardly worth having. And this thought, though it may not be very profound, suggests one great delight of the woods, everything is free—is natural. No one but tireless nature has labored. No eyes have ached, no back has become bent, in the making of this couch of moss; no hands have toiled to rear the grateful shade of the maple. The refreshing splash and ripple of the brook is freely, unconsciously given.

The voluptuaries of the east were close students of the art of idleness. Lounging on their cushions, they listened to soft music and watched the movements of dancing slaves. Other slaves waved cooling fans, and, if their masters were exposed to the sun, held silken canopies above them. The eastern prince thought that the pleasures of idleness could be no further perfected.

But the dancers must often have grown weary; the slaves holding the canopies fainted in the sun; the fan bearers and the musicians doubtless wondered at the unjust fate which condemned them to labor in order that others might enjoy. No Indian rajah or Persian lord ever reclined upon an easier couch than this one on which the fisherman stretches himself. The brook makes the most delightful of music. Sunbeams dancing on leaf and moss and ripples are as pleasant to watch as the movement of weary slaves.

Nor do the sights and sounds of the woods lack variety. The music of the water is mingled with the twitter of forest birds—thrushes and wood sparrows; the songful enthusiasm of their annual youth is past, but the midsummer notes are full of happiness, and tell of nests well stocked with little ones. Squirrels chirp and chatter. The dead leaves strewing the ground are of every shade of brown and red and yellow, and the slender shafts of sunlight, which dart down through the breeze stirred foliage overhead, never fall twice upon colors that are exactly similar.

The trout fisherman, half dreamy, half observant, and wholly happy, has lain there till the long, warm summer afternoon is drawing to a close. The shy little wood creatures that love the dusk come out of their hiding places and run near him, quite fearless of his motionless figure. Dullete, monolike creatures are here, the flying squirrels, in soft gray draperies. A mink trots over the wet bowlders in the brook's bed, and, conscious of its own importance, eyes the man suspiciously.

Darkness is coming on, and it is time for the trout fisherman to go home. He leaves the mossy bank regretfully, half persuaded that idleness, and not work, is man's chief blessing.—Francis S. Palmer in Christian Union.

A Bride of Two Years.

England can furnish instances of child marriages, not perhaps to any great extent, but as young as any to be found in eastern countries, where such marriages are almost of daily occurrence. The youngest English bride on record is, beyond all doubt, a daughter of Sir William Brereton, who in the Sixteenth century was united in bonds of holy matrimony, when only two years of age, to a bridegroom who was only her senior by one year. In this case the children were carried into the church, and their elders spoke for them. Subsequently, when the pair reach years of maturity, they ratified the strange tie. In this instance the object was to carry out a desire to unite properly.—All the Year Round.

For Towing a Few Hundred Miles.

In April, 1888, the engines of the steamship California, from Hamburg for New York, broke down when the vessel was about fifty-six miles southeast of Nantucket shoals and 300 miles east of this city. She was towed to this port by the freighter Chateau Margaux, bound from New York to Bordeaux. The latter was awarded $15,000 salvage.—New York Evening Sun.

Indians and Japanese.

The Indians of the interior have nothing in common with those of the western coast. They lack the small feet, almond eyes, coarse, heavy black hair, short stature and timidity that mark the coast Indian as coming from Japan.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

A HYPNOTIC IMPOSTER.

An Englishman Who Could Do Many Things For Teachers of Hypnotism.

The subject who came to me had been a shining light in the profession, and I have reason to know that he was exceptionally gifted. He had performed to crowded houses under several great artists at the Aquarium, and elsewhere in London and the provinces. He had figured at select seances of scientific hypnotists. He had been privately operated on by medical men anxiously seeking after truth. And, by his own statement, he had humbugged them all. What proof had I, then, that he was not humbugging me? Ample proof. He offered, in the first place, to do under my direction everything which he had done in public and private seances when under supposed hypnotic control. I contemplated, in the first instance, accepting this offer and giving a demonstration to a select circle, and it was solely owing to myself that this was not done.

As a preliminary, I [illegible] him across the backs of two chairs—the back of his head resting on one and his heels on the other. He remained so for several minutes. On a pass being made over him with the hand, his body became arched upward or downward. Two fairly robust individuals next sat on his body, and the "cataleptic" supported them without signs of inconvenience. He then himself thrust a needle into his arm and through the lobe of his ear, to prove that he was insensible to pain while in the cataleptic state.

Next he showed how one side of his face could be drawn down by toothache ("suggested" by the operator), while the other side was distended in a broad grin. Again, at the "suggestion" of the operator, the grin and the toothache changed sides, and so on. He offered to swallow an ounce of cayenne pepper in a glass of water, but unfortunately I had no cayenne pepper at hand. I asked him whether he could take a wineglassful of ipecacuanha, and he professed readiness to do it at once. The cayenne pepper I could partly understand. It would be a mere question of standing a certain amount of pain. But I asked him how he managed to control the effect of the ipecacuanha. "We only do it for a time," he said. "You can learn to do it with practice, like the rest of the tricks. But we always bring the stuff up after the performance."

He also expressed his readiness to drink oil. Among novel tricks which he offered to perform was that of "slowing" the pulse while under hypnotic influence. Of this he claimed to be the original inventor. I asked him whether all the "subjects" were equal impostors. "All," he said. He knew them all personally and would answer for them. He ridiculed the mere suggestion that there could be anything genuine in hypnotism, whether in Paris, London or anywhere else, but here he may have spoken beyond his knowledge.—London Truth.

A Reminiscence of Fanny Kemble.

The late Fanny Kemble is remembered by old residents of Germantown and Philadelphia as a superb horsewoman. She had a fiery temper, which matched that of her husband, Pierce Butler, and speedily brought about what is still one one of the most noted divorce trials reported in the law books. In her youth she was remarkably beautiful, and in the role of Juliet she was the personification of dazzling loveliness. She was noted for her keenness of wit even in the days of her old age. Once, when an impertinent street lounger stepped up to her while she was looking in the window of a bric-a-brac store and said, "Are you fond of antiquities?" Mrs. Kemble quickly unpinned her veil and turning on the man her aged face (she was then 70) asked, "Are you?" One of Mrs. Kemble's daughters is Mrs. Wistar of Germantown, well known in literature.—Harper's Weekly.

A Matter of Fact Dog.

There are prosaic men and women, and there are matter of fact dogs. For purely business purposes they are often the best.

We once owned an excellent retrieving spaniel of the simple order of mind, without a grain of humor. This dog accompanied us muskrat when we wanted to shoot a bullfinch in the garden to stuff. The gun went off, and the poor bullfinch dropped.

Now, this dog had been used, when the gun was fired, to go and look for a dead or wounded rabbit. So, instead of looking under the apple tree, he disappeared into the hedge, and in a few minutes he returned with a rabbit in his mouth! So much for the value of a matter of fact dog.—London Spectator.

The First and Last Time.

On a sultry day in August an aged negro who gloried in the name of Pompey, was driving through Main street in Springfield, Mass., a poor old skeleton of a horse attached to a heavy load of wood.

By the most frantic efforts the horse had succeeded in dragging his load over an unusually high crossing when suddenly the poor animal stopped, reared in the air and fell dead on the street. Pompey stood for a moment in silent astonishment, with extended hands, pendent lip and bulging eyeballs, then exclaimed, "By gum! I neber knowed him do dat afore!"—Cor. New York Press.

A First Thought In Church.

A little western boy less than 8 years old was taken to church for the first time. He gazed about with much interest and finally asked in a clear but awestruck voice, "Mamma, where's God?"—New York Tribune.

Love For Teachers.

"Do you love your teacher?"
"I suppose I have to."
"Why so, Tommy?"
"Because the Bible says we must love our enemies."—New York Telegram.

A Remarkable Decision.

The decision of the New York courts the other day in favor of the Godeys, granting them the right to illustrate their new style dresses by printing representations of them on the figures of prominent society women, whose faces are so well reproduced that one cannot but recognize them, will strike terror to the hearts of prominent women in the north and everywhere, but if the law says it's right it's right, and that is all there is to be said about it. If your face appears in a fashion magazine over a dress pattern of a gymnasium suit, a full dress costume, or anything else the fashion designer cares to represent in the line of women's clothes, all you can do is just "to grin and bear it" and say nothing at all.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

An Amusing Newspaper Blunder.

Edmund Yates writes: "One of the most amusing newspaper blunders I have recently met with occurred in connection with the manifestations at Brussels. On the line of the route followed by the procession stands a marble statue of General Belliard, a Frenchman, who fought at Waterloo and died in 1832. Somebody placed a universal suffrage placard in his hand. Upon this the Paris papers, misled by a telegram, announced that the insurgents had attacked the king's escort, seized General Belliard and forced him to carry a seditious handbill against his will."

New York at the Fair.

The four statues which will occupy niches in front of the New York state building at the World's fair are of Christopher Columbus, Hendrick Hudson, George Clinton, the first governor of this state, and Roswell P. Flower, the present executive.—Buffalo Express.

THE HERO OF TODAY:

ELEMENTS OF CHARACTER WHICH RAISE MAN TO THE FORE.

A Man Is Often Judged by the Men He Admires, as Is a Nation by the Kind of Men She Honors—Courage Is Not the Only Quality Requisite in a Hero.

It is a truth which has not yet come to be fully realized that much of the character of an individual depends upon his ideas of heroism. What he admires and honors is a good test of what he is, or rather what he longs to be, and his heroes will always have a strong attractive force, which will draw him as far as possible into their sphere. In all the various types of the hero one quality remains forever prominent—courage. The cannibal who has distinguished himself by the number of his murders, the robber chieftain who has held thousands at bay, the Indian with his belt adorned with scalps, the duelist who holds his life cheaper than his fancied honor, have all in times past been regarded as heroes, and whatever estimate they now receive no one denies their courage.

Equally so, the martyr who goes cheerfully to the stake; the man who braves obloquy and contempt for truth as he holds it; he who risks his life to save another, or devotes it unreservedly to the good of mankind; one who can bear and endure, and another who can dare and do; all are, in turn, heroes to those who appreciate them, and all are distinguished by the same element—courage. Whatever be the virtue or the vice; whatever the cause engaged in; whatever the motives which govern the life—no one has ever been made a hero, even in thought, unless in some way he has shown strength and bravery. Cowardice and weakness, pusillanimity and fear, are opposed in their very essence to all heroism, and no merits, however great, can form a connecting link between them.

The mistake, however, which has long been made, and which we are only beginning to correct, is that courage alone can make a hero. To some extent we have given up this notion. Our present heroes are no longer cannibals or robbers or duelists, however courageous such men may have been. We have come to admit that something else must be united to bravery to create heroism. And what is that something else? Is it not some noble purpose outside of self and its interests. The glad and willing sacrifice for something higher than pleasure or interest, comfort or ease, united to the courage which scorns all mean temptations and persists in the truth and right, as far as it is seen, spite of all obstacles—that is the true heroism which we are vaguely seeking and beginning to appreciate.

The prizefighter may be bold and intrepid in giving and receiving blows; but, except to a few like himself, he has ceased to be a hero, for his purposes are low and selfish. The suicide may have the courage to throw away his life, but he has not that heroic courage which lives on, enduring, hoping and working, in spite of all the adverse circumstances of his lot. The great conquerors of the world who have plunged their nations into cruel wars for the sake of their own glory and aggrandizement were pre-eminently the heroes of a past age, but we are gradually learning that the true hero of his country is the man who seeks her best welfare, who defends her rights and consults her interests, and who for this great purpose is ready to take praise or blame, to govern or to forbear, to live or to die. Our own Washington and Lincoln were men of this stamp, and we are justly proud to have them head the list of our country's heroes.

Not, however, only in public life and under the gaze of the multitude do we find the true hero. In the home and in the schoolroom, in the office and the workshop, in the crowded street and open field, he may be discovered by those who can appreciate what heroism really is. Whoever has a high and worthy purpose at heart, whether of truth or duty or love, and also has the strength and courage to work, to sacrifice and to suffer, if need be, for its sake, is worthy of the name.

One quietly denies himself pleasure or comfort or ease for the aged parent or the sick child. Another gives up cherished plans because they would interfere with the claims of a dependent family. One faces the displeasure of friends and society sooner than forsake his principles; another employs all his power in defense of the weak and against the oppressor. Our hero must be strong and brave, but he must also be magnanimous and unselfish, not counting the cost, in his great desire to further his noble purpose.

Such men and women are always among us, but in the retirement of private life they are inevitably known but to a few. Those few, however, should esteem it their privilege and duty to honor such true heroism, and to extend its influence. Especially should the young be taught to recognize and revere it. It should be an important part of the education of every child to form within him a true and worthy conception of heroism, and to enable him to recognize it wherever it exists.

Too often his only idea of it is found in the sensational romance, or in the examples around him of men who, for praise or glory or gain, will do daring deeds and manifest a physical bravery often at a fearful cost to their fellowmen. Let us give him a truer ideal and afford him a higher example.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Didn't Know It All.

Boy—I seen a card on y'r winder wid "Boy Wanted" writ on it. Got one yet?

Merchant—I have not found one to suit me. Have you had any experience in our business?

Boy—No, not much, but I s'pose you'll be around yourself some o' th' time.—Good News.

Difficult to Distinguish.

Bilkins—Is your friend an English author?

Wilkins—No; he's only a dyspeptic.—New York Weekly.

Animals in the Rain.

Horses and cattle never look so miserable as when standing exposed to cold and driving rain. Every field in which cattle are turned loose should have some loose shelter provided, however rough and hardy the stock. If left to themselves in a state of nature they would travel miles to some well known bank or thicket, which would at least give cover against the wind. Shut up between four hedges, they are denied alike the aid of human forethought and of their own instinct.

Bewick's vignettes of old horses or unhappy donkeys, huddled together in driving showers on some bleak common, express a vast amount of animal misery in an inch of woodcut.—London Spectator.

Knew the Species.

Spendall—I gave you that five dollars as a friendly tip. Why do you hand four dollars back?

Waiter—I likes to keep everything on a business basis, sah. Gents wot's so very friendly w'en dey has money is apt to come round tryin to borrer w'en dey gets broke.—New York Weekly.

CALIFORNIA'S FRUIT.

Large Shipments Sent East Last Year.

THE WINE AND BRANDY TRADE

A Decrease in Dried Fruit Exportations—A Large Increase in Raisins.

The following is the annual report of the California State Board of Trade. It is a very flattering showing for this state:

RED BLUFF, Cal., March 14.

Hon. Eugene J. Gregory, President California State Board of Trade, San Francisco.

Dear Sir.—I submit herewith the annual report of shipments of fruit, wine and brandy from California for the year 1891.

I have been unable to obtain the official data until quite recently, and hence the delay. There is this to be said of our annual reports of fruit shipments: They are the most nearly accurate compilations that are given to the public in compact and available form for the entire state. They rest upon facts furnished by those who are in a position to know, and who have no motive to misstate them. A study of these reports will always be a safe guide to those most interested.

Shipments by sea from San Francisco. Compiled from the Commercial Herald and Market Review Annual for 1892.

	Pounds
Canned Fruits	32,991,600
Dried Fruits	696,681
Green Fruits	1,099,510
Nuts	108,785
Raisins	233,640
Total pounds of all kinds	35,091,216
Total in carloads	1,754 5

General summary of shipments of fruit and products of fruit by rail and by sea, 1892, expressed in carloads.

Fruits of all kinds by rail	18,741
Fruits of all kinds by sea	1,754
Total fruits	20,495
Wine and brandy by rail	2,678
Wine and brandy by sea	2,153
Total carloads	25,326

The tables show a steady increase in fruit shipments, although not so rapid as has been predicted. The severe weather in the south greatly reduced the orange crop. There was a falling off in shipments with 1891 of 1208 carloads.

There was by no means a full crop of deciduous fruit in 1892, but the increase over 1891 shipped by rail, excluding canned fruit, reached 809 carloads. The gain in shipments of canned fruit by rail was 1363 carloads, which, added to the 809 carloads of other deciduous fruits, makes a gain of shipments by rail of 2208 carloads.

To show the entire gain of shipments from the state there must be added the gain in shipments of fruits by sea, which was 800 carloads gain, making in all a gain for 1892 over 1891 of 3008 carloads. The shipments by sea, mainly canned fruit, were nearly double those of 1891.

Some notable differences not mentioned are to be observed.

Our shipments by rail of green deciduous fruits in 1892 exceeded those for 1891 by 600 carloads, and exceeded shipments of same in 1890 by 2135 carloads.

The citrus fruits shipped in 1892 exceeded same for 1890 only 80 carloads.

The dried fruit shipments by rail for 1892 were less than in 1890 or 1891.

The raisins shipped by rail in 1892 exceeded those shipped in 1890 by 500 cars, and exceeded shipments in 1891 only 40 carloads.

In canned goods the gain for 1892 was quite large. This was due partly to stock of 1891 held over into the new year, and partly by reason of a smaller pack for 1891 than usual.

The railroads shipped 1360 carloads more in 1892 than in 1891, and there went out of the state by sea 938 carloads more than in 1891, making a total gain in canned goods of 2337 carloads.

Considering the distribution of the fruit crop of the state, the same facts are noticeable as in former reports. Southern California continues to produce practically all our citrus fruits, while Northern California produces the bulk of the deciduous fruits.

Southern California shipped in 1892 by rail of deciduous fruits in all forms 2383 carloads, while northern California shipped by rail 12807 carloads, and by sea from San Francisco 1754 carloads—the products of northern California. There were doubtless some shipments by sea from ports in the south, but I have not been able to obtain any account of them.

In the shipments by sea the notable increase is in canned fruits.

There was but little difference in the shipments of other fruits.

In 1891 our exports of canned fruit by sea amounted to 761 carloads. In 1892 we exported the equivalent of 1754 carloads.

England took 172,073 cases in 1891 and 191,607 cases in 1892. Australia more than doubled her purchases, taking 41,272 cases in 1892. Germany took eight cases in 1891 and 2062 cases in 1892.

Large shipments were made by sea to eastern cities. More shipments were made in the city of New York alone than the entire amount shipped by sea in 1891, and withal the railroads carried 1400 more than in 1891.

I am informed by the railroad companies that some part of the canned goods are vegetables, but that the proportion is quite small.

From an intelligent view of the fruit industry it will be found to be in an exceedingly prosperous condition and growing rapidly throughout the state.

N. P. CHIPMAN,
Chairman of Committee of Industrial Resources of the State.

CALIFORNIA'S RESOURCES.

They Will Be Advertised Liberally at the World's Fair.

The following circular has been issued by the California State Board of Trade:

A law was passed by the last legislature providing for the publication, by the governor, of a book expository of the resources of this state, for distribution at the World's Fair, Chicago.

It is proposed to briefly describe the resources of each county in a space averaging about 1000 words. Will you favor us with an article about your county or a statement showing the following:

Principal industries.
Character of soil.
Varieties, value and amount of fruit production.
How marketed; green or dried.
Price received for fruit.
Net profit, per acre, of a few of the leading varieties.
Price of land improved and unimproved.
Is irrigation practiced?
If so, what is the water supply?
Cost of irrigation per acre.
Any other facts to show the merits of the county.

I am pressed for time and an early reply will be greatly appreciated.

WALTON WINS.

THE FIRE DEPARTMENT CASE DECIDED.

The Triangle Appointee is Declared Legally Appointed—An Appeal.

Judge Harris yesterday decided the case of the people, upon complaint of F. S. Clark, Truman G. Hart, Charles Inns, A. M. Loper and J. W. Smith, against Tim Walton, in favor of the defendant. This action was brought last August to determine whether the Triangle had the right to appoint Walton chief of the volunteer fire department of this city. It had its rise in one of the most shameful acts of the many perpetrated by the trio known as the Triangle.

To further their political designs William Fahey, Burt Alford and S. H. Cole decided to convert the fire department into a political machine. On the night of March 7th of last year Alford introduced a series of resolutions removing Chief Engineer Higgins and appointing Tim Walton in his place. Another resolution made G. H. Walley assistant in the stead of Truman G. Hart, whose place had not been declared vacant. City Marshal Morgan swore in a number of deputies and at the order of the Triangle put the latter's appointees in possession of the apparatuses. An injunction was procured against the Triangle and its servants and the former officers put in possession again. This injunction was afterwards dissolved and the Triangle has owned the apparatus ever since.

The highhanded action of Fahey, Alford and Cole aroused a storm of indignation among both Democrats and Republicans at the time. The privilege of the volunteers to elect their own officers had never before been questioned and they claimed it to be a statutory right. There was no pretense that the old officers were in any way incompetent, and no reason was given for making the change. This was not necessary, however, for it was plain to every one that it was merely a stroke of politics.

The above action was brought against Walton last August, and was finally submitted on the complaint, the answer and an agreed statement of facts. The case will be immediately appealed to the supreme court.

Card From Joseph Spinney.

I have recently been asked by a good many people why the Farmers Bank is making an active canvass against my election. I have told them that I do not know the reason except that it might be because the present board of city trustees acting as a board of equalization had reduced the assessment on the bank, and they do not know what my ideas are regarding matters of that kind.

AN ELECTION BET.

Crowds View the Hat in the Window of the Poor Man's Friend.

S. H. Redden, of Redden & Collins, wood and coal dealers, and W. Parker Lyon, Fresno's Furniture King, have made a wager on the coming election. If Adams is elected, Redden is to escort W. Parker Lyon from K street to the depot and return on Mariposa street, Lyon to wear a ladies hat of the latest style to be selected by Redden. If Fahay is elected, Lyon is to escort Redden over the same route, Reddon to wear a lady's hat of the latest style selected by Lyon. After the procession, which is to be led by their Salvation Army band, the hat is to be put up at auction, the proceeds to go to the Associated Charities. For the benefit of those who may not be able to attend the procession, Lyon has placed on exhibition in the show window of the Poor Man's Friend the hat he intends Redden to wear. The procession will form at the Southern Pacific Hotel Tuesday, April 11th, at 2 p.m. So remember the day and date as the management expects to make this one of the greatest events of the season.*

FRESNO'S FUTURE.

She Must Be Redeemed From Misrule.

HER PRESENT CONDITION

The Citizens Tomorrow Must Enter Their Protest Against a Continuance of Jobbery.

EDITOR REPUBLICAN.—With such a magnificent showing of refinement and plenty as this city affords, it would seem that Fresno had attained the ideal so far as human efforts can avail; that her happiness would be complete; that the goal of her ambition had been reached. Such, however, is not the case. In moral progress she has not kept pace with her industrial achievements. With this mighty influx of the intelligent, the cultured and the refined have come the ignorant, the vicious and the evil disposed from all quarters of the globe, who by the very nature of our laws and institutions have been admitted to full fellowship and to the enjoyment of all the privileges of American citizens.

As a result of all this there springs up the corrupt and unscrupulous political schemer who hesitates not to make use of this motley horde to attain his own personal ends. As a consequence of all this we have a city government in the hands of a political ring that bid defiance to the wishes and behests of the better class of our community, and hesitate at no means however reprehensible to prolong their power. Under this detestable regime the public moneys have been squandered in ways that are perfectly familiar to all; the vicious element has increased and flourished under its fostering influence; crime of every description, even to midnight assassination, has run riot in our midst without the perpetrators being punished. Our police force has been notoriously inactive and inefficient. Princely vagrants and noted violators of law have been unmolested, presumably because they had a pull.

These are facts that cannot be controverted; yet those in authority have the audacity to ask the votes of decent people to continue them in power.

But says some one, so and so has had strings on him and could not alone accomplish any good. The man who has not the moral courage to at least try to do his duty, who is manly enough to charge his dereliction of duty to some one else's influence does not deserve to be trusted again. He should be publicly rebuked at the polls.

This is a severe arraignment of our community, but such are the existing conditions already known far and wide.

Silence ceases longer to be a virtue. It only serves to strengthen the already erroneous impression in many places of a morbid acquiescence on our part. Passive submission to further insults and indignities heaped upon us by those who should be our public servants rather than our masters only serves to make our condition worse and more ridiculous in the eyes of our neighbors. The time has arrived when we must rid ourselves of this corrupt ring in our city politics and banish from among us the criminal element that is a blight on the fair name of Fresno. The fight must be made and no better opportunity will ever offer than now.

Let all good citizens turn out on election day and make the best fight of their lives. With a united effort we will be able to redeem ourselves and return once more to honest government.

FERG'S SCARE.

How He Went on a Chase for Evans and Sontag.

EDITOR REPUBLICAN.—I see by the evening Expositor that the editor of that sheet is trying to make a great ado about that fish story that myself and several others played on him, and caused him to become the laughing stock of two-thirds the people of the town.

The substance of the story is this: I was passing by the Expositor office and noticing a crowd discussing Sontag and Evans, among them being Ferguson, and seeing that he was pretty hilarious, I thought I would play a little joke on him.

I said that Evans and Sontag had been sleeping in my barn for two nights and that I was going to drive them to Centerville that night, whereupon Ferg. rushed to the telephone, amidst the laughter of the crowd, and called up the sheriff's office and notified them of the near proximity of the noted outlaws.

A MOUNTAIN RAILWAY

Climbing Up From Lovely Pasadena.

A MARVEL OF MECHANISM

Cog Wheels Done Away With and the Steepest Grades Easily Surmounted.

Special Correspondence of The Republican.

PASADENA, April 7.—When I left Fresno a couple of months ago, I did not expect that I could be easily surprised by anything I should find in the southern portion of the Golden state. And yet I confess to a most thorough and complete astonishment when I found out what the Pasadena mountain railway was.

Pasadena itself is—at this time of the year—a revelation of glory and beauty, a perfect apocalypse of fragrance and flowers, even to flower-gemmed California, for I do not think there is to be found a more beautiful spot on the face of the earth—Fresno, of course, excepted.

The winter rains have washed away all trace of the dust of summer, and the dilapidation of Autumn and the richness of the verdure, the orange groves with their Mid-setouched golden balls, the lemons, limes, guavas, pepper trees, eucalyptus and all other trees, as well as semi-tropical plants, shrubs and flowers, make a garden of exquisite beauty.

The name, Pasadena, signifies "The Crown of the Valley," and the city stands on the crown of the San Gabriel valley. Towering over it to the height of nearly 7000 feet are the Sierra Madres, a most enchanting range of mountains, which can be quickly reached without climbing up miles and miles of foothills. It is up this mountain that the most wonderful mountain railway is now being constructed.

One of the leading citizens of Pasadena is Professor Lowe, who had charge of the United States army balloon corps. He made personally over 500 ascents with his balloon during the late civil war, for the purpose of observing the maneuvrers of the enemy. He is the inventor of the largely used water gas system of lighting and heating, and is a capitalist who makes money out of everything he touches.

He fell in love with these Sierra Madres and in a year's time, after exploring them first, had decided to build a railway to the highest peaks.

I have been to the summit several times and feel competent, therefore, to give your readers a fair description of this gigantic undertaking and the wondrous scenery it presents.

The Pasadena Mountain railway connects at Mountain junction, above Pasadena, with the Los Angeles Terminal railroad, and for two miles and a half is an electric trolley road. The change of cars is made amongst orange groves, and all the other verdant luxuriances for which the San Gabriel valley is so well known.

The grade is easy if we wind along over eleven substantial bridges, through cuts and around curves into the very heart of the mountain till we reach Rubio pavilion. The pavilion is in course of construction and is to be a perfect temple of pleasure. Fine music, concerts, entertainments, dances, illustrated lectures, etc., are being provided for. An electric fountain more gorgeous and brilliant than that in Lincoln Park, Chicago, is being provided, and peculiar displays of fire works from a peak called Mt. Vesuvius will reproduce the startling effects of a volcanic eruption (without any danger) exactly as seen at the European Vesuvius.

A number of waterfalls and cascades enliven the scene, and farther up the canyon are rich fernу dells, swimming pools, tiny lakes, a rippling, gurgling stream, and yonder you can see where

"Waters their wild tumult toss adown
The black and craggy hoss of that huge cliff."

But the great surprise and astonishment as one first enters the pavilion amphitheater, is the monster incline up Echo mountain. Imagine all Mariposa street from the railroad tracks to the court house reared almost on end, the dome of the latter crowding the upper sky. It is exactly 3000 feet from the Rubio pavilion to Echo Mountain house, a fine hotel now in course of construction on the summit, and the direct ascent is about 1400 feet. The steepness of the slope can thus readily be comprehended.

This machine is worked by immense cables tested to a direct tensile strength of over 100 tons, and made additionally secure by a still stronger safety cable which works automatically. There are only three tracks for the ascending and descending cars, but, as they must of necessity pass each other midway on the incline, a turnout with four tracks is there arranged for that purpose.

The passenger cars are not yet running, but I have made the ascent on the construction car, and the ease and smoothness with which the perpendicular trip will be made by thousands of people passes the comprehension of those who have only ridden on the ordinary cars, or who have ascended Pike's Peak or the White Mountain railway on its cogged rails. No smoke, no cinders, no puffing engine and horrible noises, nothing to distract your attention from the marvellous pictures of entrancing beauty that present themselves to your enlarging vision.

We ride through Granite Gorge, where for eight months all the workmen that could clamber on to the rocks were drilling and blasting and shovelling before a single tie could be laid. Then we come to the Macpherson trestle, a gigantic bridge, named in honor of Professor Lowe's chief engineer, D. J. Macpherson. If placed on the level it would appear a most singular object, being over 100 feet higher at one end than the other.

Near the summit of the incline another bridge is crossed, and then we are on Echo mountain, where the new hotel is to be. It receives its name from the remarkable echoes given out from the canyons, gorges and great faces of rock in its rear which, when a rifle is fired, throw out the sound until one hears the firing of a small army.

This is as far as the railroad is completed at present. The grading, however, is done nearly to the summit of Observatory Peak, and over thirty miles of bridle roads, or trails, radiate from here. We rode to the summit on the bridle road, some of our party taking mules and others burros.

The Bostonians.

The charming qualities of "Robin Hood," in which the Bostonians will be heard in this city on April 17th, are so numerous as to almost discourage any detailed comment thereon. Probably no comic opera of recent authorship, either in Europe or America, has ever possessed so many numbers that have attained popularity through the music publishers. There is Mr. Barnabee's introductory song, "I am the Sheriff of Knottingham," which is one of the jolliest conceits ever sung and which is always redemanded many times; the "Churning, Churning, Churning" trio of Barnabee, Lang and D'Arville is exquisite in harmony; Mr. Cowles' song, "It Takes Nine Tailors to Make a Man," which opens the second act is richly melodious. Miss Davis' solo, "Oh, Promise Me," has been sold by music dealers by the thousand copies; Mr. Karl's moonlight serenade is beautifully sentimental; Mr. MacDonald's song, "Brown October Ale," in rollicksingly catchy; Mr. Frothingham's comic round, "Oh See the Little Lambkins Play," is deliciously droll, and Mr. Barnabee's "Tinker" song with chorus is full of color. Besides these there are many concerted pieces, such as the quartet in the second act, which has become famous. And still further, the choruses and instrumental bits which knit together the whole work are of surpassing beauty.

FRESNO'S SOCIAL SWIM

The Spring Season Opens Quietly.

TENNIS IS AGAIN IN ORDER

A Young Husband in Trouble—The Davis Society's Monthly Party.

The winter season has closed and spring, gentle spring, with its poetry, bonnets and cholera morbus is here. On the whole, society has done credit to itself and one may use the adjective "brilliant" in speaking of the season that has just come to an end. Those who formerly entertained on the largest scale were least heard from and the most swagger functions were given by people who modestly remained in the background during former seasons. The months before the usual summer exodus are not very promising in a social way, though half a dozen enjoyable affairs of secondary grandeur may be expected. Of course, I have not counted upon possible surprises.

The event of the week just passed was undoubtedly the performance of "Patience," given at the Barton Monday night, as a complimentary benefit to C. M. Pyke. I was positively astonished at the talent displayed by some of the amateurs. Young Kirby's portrayal of Bunthorne was particularly meritorious and there's no telling to what heights of operatic distinction he might attain with proper training. E. G. White, who played the Colonel, also displayed much talent. He has a good voice, acts with considerable naturalness and is self-possessed to a degree seldom observed in amateurs. The choruses were good, but of the two the male was superior; in fact, on the whole the gentlemen did better than the ladies. It seems to me a pity that all this talent should remain uncultivated and I hope those who took part in the opera will organize a dramatic club or something like that and give a comic opera every two or three months. Martinez, a town with 1500 inhabitants, has a choral society which produces comic operas better than half the professional companies that visit the interior circuit. It was organized five years ago and is very prosperous. People come from all parts of Contra Costa county to witness their performances and they enjoy them, too, for they are first-class, as a rule. Now, why cannot Fresno, a city with a population of 12,000, have something like that? They could give performances for sweet charity sake, or for their own benefit for that matter. Let the people who took part in "Patience" think about this.

Several of the dear girls were talking about the expensive gowns this season and wondering how they would economize, since each gown costs about twice as much a single one did last season. At last one of them had an idea. "The only thing we can do is to economize on our bathing suits," said she, and the rest of them agreed with her. This determination, I am sure, will result in a large increase in the number of our gilded male youth at the seaside resorts this year.

Speaking of dress the percale and linen blouses of last season are seen again and it is certain that the fashion of jacket and blouse will survive through the coming summer. It is too pretty, too convenient and too chic to be dropped. Scarlet and pink are favorite colors, and wash well. There are also lovely white lawns with hair lines of color and sometimes of tiny dots. These shirt waists are made in side plaits, often with wide double ruffles down the front.

A certain young married man, I hear, is resting under a horrible suspicion. The other morning, after duly impressing an affectionate kiss upon his wife's alabaster brow, he started to go down town. He had got about fifty yards from the house when it occurred to her that she forgot to charge her husband with a little commission. She immediately ran to the front porch, where the servant was sweeping, and called "Henry, Henry!" Henry didn't hear, however, and the wife said to the servant girl, a very pretty one, "Call Henry, will you?" The obedient girl at once cried "Henry" at the top of her voice several times, but Henry was not to be called back that morning. Now Henry's wife is wondering whether the servant girl is only stupid or whether—well, whether she is in the habit of calling him "Henry."

The Fresno Tennis Club will soon have a meeting and will take up the racket with old time vigor. The prospect is that it will be a good year for the game on the coast and it is to be hoped our people will take it up again with enthusiasm. The club has very good grounds and it will require but little work to put them in first class condition. Owing to the appropriation of part of the lot for a church building the number of courts will be reduced from three to two, which will, after all, be sufficient.

The regular monthly social of the Society Dania was held last evening in Edgerly hall and the attendance was very large. It was perhaps the most enjoyable event given by the society this season. The Danes never meet in numbers without having a good time and do not, like some people, take their pleasure solemnly. The evening was spent in dancing and conversation and at midnight an appetizing collation, prepared by the fair hands of the ladies, was served. Witty speeches were made by a number of the society's best speakers. After feasting dancing was resumed. There were present: Hon. and Mrs. H. J. T. Jacobsen, Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. M. Goth, Mr. and Mrs. J. Gilmac, Mr. and Mrs. N. C. Hansen, Mr. and Mrs. George Larsen, Mr. and Mrs. L. Lauritsen, Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Jansen, Mr. and Mrs. V. Hansen, Misses M. Hansen, M. Jensen, J. Sorensen, P. Nielsen, M. Iversen, L. Uhd, R. Moe, M. Nielsen, L. and A. Anderson, Mary Jensen, Maren Jansen, Jennie Peterson, Selma Johnsen, H. Anderson, Mrs. Olenhough, Miss C. Peterson, Messrs. Peter Lund, S. Hansen, R. Hansen, H. Ahrensberg, H. Benson, J. Stockholm, A. and L. Iversen, A. Jorgenson, O. P. Kjeldsen, J. Torkelson, A. Bruuger, A. Hasselbach, P. Madsen, S. Sorensen, N. H. Gulsager, C. Dau, M. Christensen, J. J. Krog, N. Ostergoard, C. S. Andreassen, N. H. Fuglsang, A. Petersen, D. L. Thomsen, Jens Sandahl, J. Andersen, B. M. Lauritsen, C. Johnson.

It is time for the 50 90 club to bestir itself, too. The officers will have to do a good deal more than they have done if they wish to be pointed out as successful darlings of officers by us girls. The Clinton cooking club will give its regular monthly social soon. The New England club is yet to be heard from, and the Raisin City Wheelmen don't seem anxious to repeat their success. The Fresno Social club has died of humiliation, and the dances that were to have been given by Companies C and F each month haven't been given. What a fine record of failures!

It seems to me a good deal of infodicious abuse has been directed at Evangelist Ellsworth by some newspapers because of his condemnation of dancing. Why not, instead, show if they can that the evangelist's figures are false, and that dancing is not oftenest the cause of the fall of young women. I am inclined myself to believe his calculations exaggerated, but am informed by a minister that the superintendent of police of New York city has said about the same thing as Mr. Ellsworth. The latter being engaged in rescue work should certainly be in possession of trustworthy facts concerning this matter and intemperate criticism cannot deprive them of their force. Dancing is certainly indulged in to excess when at a ball the program has all the way from fourteen to twenty dances on it. It is quite common, too, for young women who are favorites to be compelled to divide some of the numbers so that they can oblige all of their admirers. Considered from a physiological standpoint alone this excess deserves severe condemnation.

MLLE. ARSENIC.

An English Court Decision.

Patent medicine advertisers who offer to bank on the virtues of their remedies can be compelled to redeem their promises in the English courts. A test case decided this week by the court of appeals establishes an interesting precedent for America as well. A year ago, when the influenza was prevalent, the Carbolic Smoke Ball company in an advertisement guaranteed immunity from the disease to everybody who used the remedy three times daily for two weeks, £100 to be the forfeit. Mrs. Carlill used the smoke ball faithfully for three weeks and then the epidemic seized her. She sent in her claim for £100, but the money wasn't paid.

All sorts of excuses were offered. It was argued that the offer was a mere device to attract attention, a wager vague in its terms, that there was not a complete contract, because Mrs. Carlill did not notify the company of her acceptance of the offer. All these excuses have been brushed aside by the courts in which Mrs. Carlill brought suit. Lord Justice Bowen, in the decision, likens the case to the offer of a reward for a lost dog. People do not write letters to the advertiser accepting his offer, but they look for the dog. It is safe to say that the decision will work a sweeping modification of the claims made on behalf of the thousand and one curealls in the public prints.—London Letter.

Unfortunate Names.

"Well, thank heavens, I am plain Mary Ann again," declared a young woman to a sympathizing friend on one of the cross town cars yesterday. "I did so hate that name—Lucile. Missus said Mary Ann wouldn't do at all. She called it 'outre' or something like that. She declared that I must be given some romantic name that would sound pretty for calling. So I have been Lucile for half a year, and I'm heartily glad that I left her and am going to Mrs. Northwest's." The other girl gave a horrified look at mention of this name. "But, my dear," she exclaimed, "I worked for Mrs. Northwest, and I know all about her. She has a daughter named Mary, and it will never do for you to be Mary too. She called me Maizie, and she'll probably call you Callie or Susanne or some other ridiculous name." Then both sighed.—Philadelphia Record.

Books Which Are Not Books.

In this catalogue of books which are no books—biblia-abiblia—I reckon court calendars, directories, pocket-books (the literary excepted), draught boards bound and lettered on the back, scientific treatises, almanacs, statutes at large, the works of Hume, Gibbon, Robertson, Beattie, Soame Jenyns and generally all those volumes "which no gentleman's library should be without," the histories of Flavius Josephus (that learned Jew) and Paley's "Moral Philosophy." With these exceptions, I can read almost anything. I bless my stars for a taste so catholic, so unexcluding.—Charles Lamb.

BROWN BRAKES!

Many Lives Saved by a Skillful Engineer.

An engineer whistles down brakes, a terrible railroad disaster is avoided by the prompt action inresponse to a signal. There is danger ahead; tired nature whistles down brakes.

This warning signal down brakes should be immediately heeded—but only by the railway employe, but by every individual who values health and longevity.

Plain facts plainly spoken by the renowned specialist Dr. E. F. Brown.

The kidneys are the filters of the body, like the waste pipes in a modern built house if they become clogged you have the whole habitation poisoned with sewage gas which means death.

That tired feeling, dizziness, pain in the back, specks floating before the eyes, etc., is the signal to down brakes—you had better heed it.

Preventive medicine. Abortive measures are better than curative remedies.

Go to the Radical Cure Dispensary before it is to late; go at once and consult those competent physicians who will candidly tell you the cause and cure for all chronic troubles; they will tell you how to wash out the kidneys and avoid a crash.

The yearly list of cases Dr. Brown reduces 7 to 15 pounds in 21 days, without injury to health—very little medicine. Consult Dr. Brown about his pleasant method for the thin (anaemic)—those wishing to gain weight.

"That Catarrh" Dr. Brown will radically cure. Those Blotches, Pimples and yellow Spots, including all skin disorders that are so disfiguring, Dr. Brown understands their nature and cure. "Oh! That Stom ch disorder!"

Go immediately to Dr. Brown.

Malaria in all its forms eradicated from the system. Fever and chills completely broken up by his wonderful discovery, Inoculation and Absorption treatment.

In fact, any of the 4000 chronic ills to which flesh is heir that requires superior medical or surgical skill, and failing of relief elsewhere, when tired and disgusted with licensed quackery or unlicensed humbuggery, go then to the Reliable, Competent, Candid and Successful Specialist, DR. E. F. BROWN, 1745 Mariposa street.

All medicines are furnished at the Radical Cure Dispensary.

Patients have no drug bills to pay.
